The Play

Bernstein, Gershwin, Sondheim, and other Jewish musicians who immigrated to Greater New York from Europe in the late 19th century have become a cornerstone of American music, and particularly of Broadway musicals. They intertwined melodies from "Father's House" and synagogue prayers, incorporating them into unforgettable songs that have become an integral part of American culture and thus contributed to the essence of what Broadway represents today. Join us for an enchanting evening called Broadway Nights, as we celebrate their creations through a delightful fusion of song and dance, and with a fresh interpretation.

Instrumental recordings: Noam Haimovich-Weinschel Violin and Viola | Tal Hershkovitz trumpet | Sharon Petrover Drums | Adam Tal Guitars
