The California Journal of Politics and Policy (CJPP) is an online journal of original scholarship, cutting edge research, and informed commentary regarding all aspects of national, state, and local government, electoral politics, and public policy formation and implementation. As was its late founding editor James Q. Wilson, the Journal's current editors are based in California, Jack Citrin at the University of California, Berkeley, and Bruce Cain and Roger Noll at Stanford. Its editorial board and contributors are leading scholars and professional experts from across the nation and around the world.

Drawing on its editors, its diverse editorial board, and an international network of scholars, practitioners, journalists, policymakers, and officeholders, CJPP provides timely insights and historical and comparative perspective on issues ranging from legislative and electoral concerns to tax and social welfare policy, the courts, campaign finance, and the changing role and character of political media.
