Velkommen to Little Norway

Welcome to Petersburg, known for its Norwegian heritage and for harboring one of Alaska's most prosperous fishing fleets.

Fishing began approximately 2,000 years ago northeast of Petersburg at Sandy Beach. The beach area served as a fish camp for local Natives of Tlingit heritage.

The region turned into a year-round community around the turn of the 20th century after a Norwegian, Peter Buschmann, eyed the blue ice of LeConte Glacier. Buschmann decided the north end of Mitkof Island, with glacier ice available nearby, would be an ideal spot for a cannery.

In 1897, construction began on the new site for Icy Straits Packing Co., for which Buschmann was manager. Icy Straits also built a sawmill to cut lumber for the building of the cannery, which was completed in 1900. Docks, homes, warehouses and other businesses sprang up around the cannery and in 1910 the city of Petersburg was incorporated.

Icy Straits, after changing hands several times, eventually evolved into Petersburg Fisheries Inc., now the largest seafood processor in town as measured by canning capacity. Petersburg Fisheries eventually developed into a major seafood-processing corporation, Icicle Seafoods Inc. Their parent company is Cooke Aquaculture, based on the East Coast of the U.S.

Many of Petersburg's residents can trace their heritage back to Norwegian ancestors, who followed Peter Buschmann to the snowy mountains and fjords that reminded them of home. At one time, Norwegian was commonly heard on the town's wooden streets and Norwegian Constitution Day is still celebrated during the Little Norway Festival each May.

Fishing continues to be the backbone of the economy, with some $45.1 million in seafood landed and processed. Logging, long another mainstay of the community, has returned. The U.S. Forest Service continues to be a major employer in the community, with staff overseeing both timber and recreation programs.

Ours is a busy, working fishing community that enjoys hosting summer visitors.

Getting to Petersburg

Getting to Petersburg is part of the adventure. To reach Mitkof Island, where Petersburg is located, you will have to fly or float. Many visitors arrive on Alaska Marine Highway ferries. Small cruise ships also bring guests to our shores.

Alaska Airlines provides twice-daily jet service from Seattle or Anchorage and several smaller scheduled and chartered air taxis serve Petersburg from throughout Southeast Alaska. And best of all, Petersburg is off the beaten path of the large cruise ships, keeping it less crowded than many tourist destinations.

Petersburg hosts a growing flotilla of luxury yachts, owned and leased by the rich and famous. It is a popular port of call for everything from recreational activities to re-supplying the vessel.

Sea lions hauled out on the "red can" greet every boat passing through the mouth of Wrangell Narrows.

PETERSBURG

Little Norway.....

BIG SHOPPING: We're a small town with a giant selection of goods and wares. You can buy colored shoelaces at our clothing store or a spool of inch-thick wire rope at our shipyard. Our art galleries feature the work of world-renowned artists and the crafts of many locals. Grocery stores here rival the selection of the chain-owned stores "down south," while our retail seafood processors will pick-up and fillet your catch or serve your recently delivered seafood, cooked to perfection. Men, don't miss our hardware stores. Home Depot and Lowes have nothing on us.

Shop keepers joke: "if we don't have it, you don't need it."

BIG WILDLIFE: Our critters are well fed. From 500 lb. black bears to 30-ton humpbacks to trophy moose, we have it all. Early morning walks or drives are the best way to view our wildlife on shore. Off-shore, charter captains can take you to view orcas, porpoises, humpbacks, sea lions and all species of sea birds. Try your hand at hooking and netting our famous wily king salmon.

BIG BOATS: Walk the 3-miles of floats in Petersburg's north, south and middle harbors and view nearly 700 vessels from 12-ft row boats to mega-tenders that can haul hundreds of thousands of pounds of salmon back to the canneries. Often mega-yachts of the rich and famous tie-up here during the summer. Sorry, no 2,000 passenger cruise ships here. We lack the restrooms and amenities for that many guests.

BIG MARKETS: Petersburg fishermen brought an estimated $39 million in income to town in 2015, according to a NOAA Fisheries report. Petersburg is ranked 26th in the nation by value of the 2015 landings.

Petersburg facts and statistics at a glance

- Population: 3,147 within the Petersburg Borough.

- Size: Mitkof Island is 23 miles at its longest point and about 16.5 miles wide at its widest point, covering 211 square miles. Much of the island's flat land is covered by muskeg bogs.

- Geography: The island's highest point is Crystal Mountain, which reaches an elevation of 3,317 feet. Mitkof Island is separated from Kupreanof Island by the 20-mile-long Wrangell Narrows, which, in some areas, is just wide enough to accommodate the state ferries. The tide in the narrows can vary as much as 23 feet in one day from high tide to low tide.

- Annual Precipitation: The average annual precipitation is about 130 inches. About half of that falls in September, October, November and December.

- Daylight: 17 hours and 50 minutes on the summer solstice; six hours and 46 minutes on the winter solstice.

- Personal income: The estimated median household income for the Petersburg/Wrangell census area is $66,125. In Petersburg, private sector wages are paid to 51 percent of the workforce; 30 percent are employed by the government sector and 19 percent are self-employed.

- Demographics: According to the 2010 Census, Petersburg is 79.9 percent white; 7.9 percent two or more races; 7 percent American Indian and Alaskan natives; 3.2 percent Asian; 0.4 percent Black; 0.2 percent Pacific Islander and 1.1 percent other.

- Vehicles & Boats: According to the State of Alaska, 1,713 passenger vehicles and 1,407 pickup trucks are registered within the Borough. Some 1,437 boats were registered locally.

- Economy: Federal, state and local government, which includes the schools and hospital, is the largest employer in the town, employing 30 percent of the workforce.

Fishing is the economic force that drove the creation of Petersburg and continues to be a driving force in today's economy.

According to NOAA Fisheries, Petersburg generated $45.1 million in fish landings, and ranked 26th place by value in the nation.

The town's seafood processors employ a total of about 1,100 people during a busy summer season.

Behind fishing, tourism and timber also drive the local economy.

- Education: About 80 percent of the population over 25 has at least a high school education. About one quarter have a bachelor's degree or higher. The Petersburg public school system has just 472 students enrolled in grades K-12 and has a graduation rate of 91 percent. The school district operates on a $8.7 million budget annually.

- Electrical: Borough owned Petersburg Municipal Power & Light provides electrical power to the borough. The borough consumes approximately 48,698,286 kilowatt hours (kWh) of power. The majority of that came from the Tye Hydro facility in Bradfield Canal connected by an 83-mile transmission line.

The local hydroelectric power source is located at Crystal Lake on Crystal Mountain south of Petersburg and generates @ 25% of the Borough's power. Less than a million kWh comes from stand-by diesel generated sources that provide back-up power to the borough.

- Garbage: The borough collects and ships 2,022 tons of solid waste to the Roosevelt Regional Landfill in Washington. Trash is compacted, baled, loaded into shipping containers and barged to Seattle. The Borough manages a co-mingled recycling program.

- Utilities: Petersburg's water is supplied by the Cabin Creek reservoir. It contains a 52 million gallon water supply that is treated and piped to 80 percent of the households. A few homes use cisterns, wells or have water delivered. Municipal sewage receives primary treatment.

- Total assessed valuation: About $312 million Borough-wide.

- Government: Petersburg Borough has a manager/assembly form of government. The borough's annual general fund budget is $9.6 million.

Petersburg offers many attractions for visitors

Petersburg offers a wide range of attractions for visitors

There is no shortage of places to see and things to do while visiting Petersburg – it’s really a question of how much you can squeeze in before you leave town.

WHAT TO SEE

Clausen Memorial Museum — Located on Fram Street between Second and Third streets. The museum provides a glimpse into Petersburg’s rich history. Outside the museum is the fountain-sculpture “Fisk” — Norwegian for fish. The 11-foot bronze work, which depicts halibut, salmon and herring, was created by Karson Boysen and dedicated in 1967.

Outlook Park/Whale Observatory — Constructed in 2003, the park is located on the beach side of Sandy Beach Road about 1.5 miles north of downtown. The park and gazebo offer public beach access, fixed binoculars, and a spectacular view of the Coastal Range. A restroom, barbecues and benches were recently added.

Sandy Beach Fish Traps — For the archeology lover, remnants of 2,000-year-old Tlingit fish traps can be found snaking their way across the mud flats of Sandy Beach during a low tide.

The beach also includes a rock in which ancient petroglyphs have been carved. The fish traps, easily overlooked by those unfamiliar with this type of fish trap, are best seen with the assistance of a guide.

Inquire at the Petersburg Ranger District about interpretive walks during the summer or at the Visitor’s Center to arrange a tour. To protect the site, persons going on their own are asked not to move or remove any of the stakes or rocks in the mud flats.

Swan Observatory — Located at Mile 16 of Mitkof Highway, the wheelchair-accessible observatory was constructed in 2008. The building provides a shielded place to view trumpeter swans, some of which winter on Mitkof Island. Though 50 to 75 swans overwinter here, hundreds more of these large waterfowl stop here between mid-October and early December to rest and feed before continuing their migratory journey to the south. Be careful not to disturb the resting swans. Bears and salmon also may be seen during the summer downriver from the Swan Observatory in the shallow waters.

Crystal Lake Hatchery — Adjacent to the Blind Slough picnic area at Mile 17 Mitkof Highway, the fish hatchery is operated by the Alaska Department of Fish and Game and the Southern Southeast Aquaculture Association. Visitors are welcome to walk the hatchery and ask questions between the hours of 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.; no tours are offered.

WHERE TO PICNIC
Eagle’s Roost Park — Bald eagles are frequent visitors to this park atop the hill by Petersburg Fisheries on Nordic Drive.

Sandy Beach Picnic Area — This day-use picnic area is at the end of Sandy Beach Road and is about two miles from downtown Petersburg. Situated in a small cove, the park has three enclosed shelters with tables, two of them with large stone fireplaces. There is a play area for children and a sand volleyball court is located near the beach. Restrooms and running water are available.

Blind Slough Recreation Area — Drive 17 miles south of Petersburg along Mitkof Highway to this impressive recreation spot. The picnic area includes tables, grills, two large covered group shelters and wheelchair accessible restrooms. It was constructed in 2009. Swimming in the saltwater slough is permitted at the risk of the swimmer.

Man Made Hole — Located at Mile 20 Mitkof Highway, this swimming hole is another picnic spot equipped with picnic tables and grills, trails and shelters — perfect for a cookout. The site was formed by removing gravel for construction of Mitkof Highway.

Ohmer Creek Campground — A day use picnic area is provided at the campground located 22 miles south of Petersburg on Mitkof Highway. Watch for signs for parking and picnic locations.

WHERE TO CAMP

Ohmer Creek Campground — Located 22 miles south of Petersburg on Mitkof Highway, this Forest Service campground has 10 sites suitable for tents or trailers up to Petersburg Whale Observatory, also called Outlook Park, is a wonderful place to take in the sights of Frederick Sound.

32-feet long, but services including waste disposal and water are no longer provided. Campers should provide their own contained waste system and bring water. No fee.

The campground is set along a trout and salmon fishing stream. Fishing is permitted but licenses are required. Please check on local fishing regulations before dropping your line.

Green's Camp — A favorite location for family picnics and beachcombing, this campground is directly on saltwater 26 miles from Petersburg on Mitkof Highway.

30 campsites, four picnic areas and multiple restrooms are available.

Wilson Creek Recreation Area — At Mile 27.9 Mitkof Highway, this area has tables, outhouses and turnarounds for trailers.

CABIN RENTALS

Twenty Forest Service cabins are scattered throughout the Petersburg Ranger District. Most cabins are accessible by boat or floatplane only. Contact charter air companies in town if you plan on flying to a cabin.

Each cabin includes tables, benches, bunks (without mattresses), wood or oil stoves (not suitable for cooking, bring your own fuel), an ax, a broom and an outhouse.

You must bring your own bedding and cooking gear. Rain gear, rubber boots and warm clothing are essential. Insect repellent is often needed during summer months. Water can be obtained from nearby streams, or lakes and should be boiled for five minutes before drinking.

Cabins can be reserved through the National Recreation Reservation Service at 1-877-444-6777, or at their website www.recreation.gov. Information and assistance with cabin reservations can be found at the Petersburg Visitor Center, the Petersburg — Located on Kupreanof Island, the Petersburg Lake Cabin is accessible by a short boat ride or kayak paddle across the Wrangell Narrows followed by a hike or by float-plane.

Petersburg Lake Cabin

Petersburg Lake is ice-free from April through November.

The hike can begin from the Kupreanof State Dock or is accessible four miles up Petersburg Creek by boat or kayak. The hike is 10.5 miles from the state dock and 6.5 miles from the upper trail.

The pan-abode style cabin sleeps six and is heated with a wood stove. A rowboat is available at the lake.

Petersburg Lake drains into Petersburg Creek, an area with outstanding steelhead, Coho, and sockeye fishing. Cutthroat trout and sockeye salmon can also be caught in the lake. In the fall, black bears can sometimes be viewed in Petersburg Creek fishing for salmon.

Kah Sheets Lake Cabin

— Located on Kupreanof Island, the Kah Sheets Lake Cabin is approachable by floatplane. The lake offers good sockeye fishing from the picnic platform or from the rowboats, which are provided at the cabin. A 2.5-mile plank trail connects the lake cabin to Kah Sheets Bay Cabin. The trail also accesses the creek for steelhead and coho fishing, and views of the falls.

The cabin, picnic platform, and outhouse all meet barrier-free standards. The cabin sleeps seven people.

Terrain surrounding the Raven's Roost cabin is flat muskeg and beyond that is steep mountain slopes. The cabin offers nice views of the Wrangell Narrows and Kupreanof Island to the west. A variety of wildlife can be seen in the area, including eagles, moose, deer, porcupines and black bears. Photo courtesy of Margaret Agner.

Raven's Roost Cabin

— Located on the mountain behind the Petersburg airport, the cabin is accessible by trail or helicopter. Scenery is exceptional year-round. The cabin sleeps six people.

The trail can be accessed two ways — a trailhead across the street from Sandy Beach Park adds a half mile of flat, gravel trail walking through the muskeg onto the 4.2 mile trek. Or shorten the trek by parking off Haugen Drive behind the airport and look for trail signs that lead uphill.

The middle section of the trail is very steep, and then flattens along the ridge top. Allow up to three hours one-way for the hike.

Water is typically available from muskeg pools, but visitors are encouraged to bring their own water, especially during dry conditions. Oil is provided.

Castle Flats Cabin — The Castle Flats Cabin lies on the edge of the mud flats on the Castle River in Duncan Canal. It is 30 minutes by air and 30 miles by boat from Petersburg. A 15-foot high tide is required for a plane to land or a 13-foot tide for a boat to anchor next to the cabin. Water is available from a small creek west of the cabin.

Good steelhead fishing runs May to June, trout runs May to October, and excellent silver salmon fishing runs throughout August.

The tidal flats in front of the cabin make this a particularly good site for bird watching. A rowboat is provided at the cabin. The Castle River Trail connects the flats cabin with the Castle River Cabin and accesses the upper rowboat. The cabin sleeps four people.

Swan Lake Cabin — This A-frame cabin constructed in 2005, is one of the district's most popular. Be sure to make cabin reservations early.

Swan Lake is an alpine lake at 1,514 feet above sea level on the mainland east of Thomas Bay. The lake is accessible by a 30-minute plane ride from Petersburg.

The cabin is surrounded by the steep peaks of the Coast Range, offering some of the most spectacular scenery and photo opportunities on any site in the district. The steep slopes are home to mountain goats and alpine flowers. Rainbow trout are plentiful in the lake.

Special cabin features include two rowboats and a boathouse. The cabin sleeps five people.

West Point Cabin — This impressive modified A-frame is located on the northern end of Kupreanof Island. The cabin, trail and outhouse are wheelchair-accessible.

The cabin also provides access to excellent beach hiking, saltwater fishing for king and silver salmon and viewing of whales in Frederick Sound. The cabin sleeps six people.

Restrooms -

It's nice to know where they are

Ferry Terminal — Restrooms can be found at the ferry terminal off of South Nordic Drive, south of South Harbor as you head out of town. The terminal also has a pay phone but is only open when a ferry is due in port.

North Harbor — Toilets are right next to the harbormaster's office. A hot shower can also be had for $1 and a pay phone is available.

South Harbor — In the South Harbor parking lot.

Visitor Information Center — Just two blocks east of Nordic Drive sits the Visitor Information Center at the corner of First and Fram streets.

Borough Gym & Pool — From downtown, take Nordic Drive and turn onto Dolphin Street. At Third Street, turn left. The public gym is on Charles W. Street between the high school and the elementary school. In addition to public toilets, there are showers available.

Borough Ball Park — At the top of Excel Street, the ball park offers toilets during spring and summer months.

Sandy Beach Park — For those on the north end of town, toilets are available at the park that can be reached after a scenic drive on Nordic Drive, the town's main street, which eventually turns into Sandy Beach Road. Bathrooms are in the picnic shelter at the north end of the park. Another bathroom is located along the road at the South end of the park as well.

Traveling South on Mitkof Highway — Restroom facilities can be found at Blind River Rapids Parking Area, Blind Slough Recreation Area, Man Made Hole, Green's Camp, Wilson Creek Recreation Area, Banana Point and Blaquiere Point Boat Launch.

Small ship cruising popular in Southeast

Petersburg is a popular stop for small cruise ships providing 4-11 day excursions through the Inside Passage. The geography is ideal for smaller vessels to cruise the protected waters of this region while being able to access scenic bays, fjords and inlets that larger vessels cannot reach.

As many as a dozen vessels make regular port calls in Petersburg and many more make regular stops to offload and board passengers and resupply the vessels.

Making regular stops in Petersburg are the National Geographic M/V Sea Bird and M/V Sea Lion and the Sitka based Alaska Dream Cruise ships include the M/V Admiralty Dream, M/V Alaskan Dream, M/V Baranof Dream, M/V Chichagof Dream, the M/V Misty Fjord, National Geographic Quest and ACL American Constellation.

The vessels carry from 8 to 175 or more passengers and range from 60 to 270-feet in length.

These cruise ship operators specifically set themselves apart from their larger counterparts that sail the high seas. Captain Jeff Behrens who owns and operates Fantasy Cruises proclaims, "We may not be the biggest, but we're up there with the best," and he notes in his promotions, "All American crew on board." This is true for most Petersburg ships.

Dennis and Toni Rogers with Alaska Sea Adventures, which operates out of Petersburg, advertise they can provide custom guided charter trips for all kinds of trips from family vacations to the special interests of researchers, photographers, whale watchers and others. Whale researchers, naturalists and other professionals are brought on board to suit the varied interests of their passengers on most local ships.

The National Geographic Sea Bird docks in Petersburg in 2015.

Literature and on-line information by each of the ships boast two topics most often: Onboard meals prepared by top chefs and the ship's schedule. Often guests eat what they bring aboard from fishing trips: salmon, crab, halibut, rockfish, shrimp and clams. Also, wildlife viewing takes priority over arrival times at the next port. Whales, porpoises or bears and moose on the beach can bring the cruise to a standstill.

Dave Berg, a travel professional out of Petersburg says people enjoy small ship cruising for a, "more intimate experience." According to Berg, small ships offer a higher ratio of crew to passengers that large cruise lines can't. Lindblad has 1 naturalist for every 10-15 guests. The company will often have 8-10 naturalists on board for 60 passengers. Berg also noted they carry Zodiacs and kayaks for all their passengers wishing side-trips among the icebergs at LeConte Bay and beach landings along the shoreline.

Generally Berg said the fewer people you have on board, the more expensive the trip will be. During off-peak trips, a passenger could get a 7-day trip for $600-$700 on a large ship. At peak-season rates the cost will be $700 to $1,000 or more per day for smaller vessels.

Three reasons large cruise ships don't visit Petersburg

It is rare to see large 2,000 to 6,000 passenger cruise ships pull into Petersburg.

First, we don't have enough public restrooms — or other amenities for that matter. A ship offloading 3,000 people would quickly fill up the streets, sidewalks, stores and restaurants.

Second, cruise ships cannot transit Wrangell Narrows. It's too shallow and in some cases not wide enough to keep the vessel within the channel.

Ships operating in Wrangell Narrows need 18-feet of water to safely navigate the waterway.

Third, Petersburg is too far from the beaten path that large ships travel when moving to and from the larger port cities such as Ketchikan, Juneau, Sitka and Skagway. Large cruise ships would lose too much sailing time getting into and out of Petersburg. A Petersburg visit would require one to two additional travel days to make a stopover here.

Wildlife viewing tips

Dawn and dusk are the best viewing times: If you arrive early or stay late, you are likely to see more wildlife.

Learn feeding habits: Many shorebirds, marine birds and waterfowl follow the tides during their feeding cycle. Other wildlife such as bears, spend large amounts of time during the summer near salmon streams and berry patches.

“View without changing behavior: Don't throw rocks to make birds fly... Harassing wildlife is illegal.”

— ALASKA FISH AND GAME

Blend-in: Wear natural colors and unscented lotions. Hide behind vegetation and rocks.

Look for sign: Tracks in the

mud and snow, unusual scents, scat and browsed vegetation provide evidence of wildlife in the area. Use these clues to locate animals.

Be patient: Allow enough time. Even in Alaska, where wildlife is abundant, it can take years, if not a lifetime, to see all the species.

Don't get too close: Give wildlife plenty of space. Binoculars and spotting scopes allow you to view wildlife without getting too close. Approach wildlife slowly and quietly. Allow animals a route to escape.

View without changing behavior: Avoid using calls or devices that attract wildlife. Don't throw rocks to make birds fly. Harassing wildlife is illegal.

Be respectful: Nests, denning areas, rookeries and calving grounds are sensitive areas. Intrusive visitors may cause parents to flee, leaving young vulnerable to the elements or predators. Stay on designated trails.

Leave "orphaned" or sick animals alone: Young animals left alone usually have parents waiting nearby.

Don't feed the animals: Don't get wildlife hooked on handouts. Some foods may even harm their digestive systems.

Area waters ideal for humpbacks

One of the best places in the world for viewing

Gulls escape the feeding frenzy from humpback whales during a bubble net feed.

By Kelly Bakos

The marine environment around Petersburg is abundant with sea life. The ecosystem is rich with plankton and fish, which makes it an ideal summer feeding ground for migratory humpback whales. Of the estimated 22,000 humpback whales in the North Pacific, approximately 5,000 – 7,000 spend the summer feeding in Southeast Alaska. Nearly half of those may pass through and feed in Frederick Sound before taking the 2,800 mile journey back to Hawaii in the fall for the birth of their calves. This makes Frederick Sound one of the best places in the world for observing humpback whales.

Orcas, sea lions, seals, and porpoises also call the local waters home. Harbor seals can be seen swimming along Petersburg's coast line and pupping on the ice near LeConte Glacier. Keep an eye out for Steller's sea lions at the harbors or along North Nordic Drive and Sandy Beach Road, where they can often be heard while hauled out on buoy markers. Orcas are sometimes observed cruising through the Wrangell Narrows.

With the waters prolific with marine activity, researchers, wildlife photographers, and eco-tourists travel here to view and study these creatures. The Petersburg Marine Mammal Center (PMMC) is a non-profit organization providing a link between the environment and the community, students, and visitors. PMMC supports traveling researchers, delivers public education programs, and responds to local reports of stranded marine mammals as an authorized responder of NOAA Fisheries' Alaska Marine Mammal Stranding Network.

PMMC's volunteers are trained to respond to a variety of situations whether it is injury, entanglement, disease, exposure to contaminants, or disorientation, and have special equipment for disentangling 40-ton free-swimming whales from marine debris, which is a dangerous job!

If you see a stranded or entangled marine mammal, do not attempt to move, feed, or approach the animal. Oftentimes, animals that appear to be distressed are actually displaying normal behavior. Whales may quietly rest on the surface for long periods of time, and it is not uncommon for seal mothers to leave their pups alone on the ice or beach while they feed. Marine mammals are protected under the Marine Mammal Protection Act, and it is illegal to disturb, approach, or handle marine mammals.

But if a marine mammal is found sick, injured or dead, reporting the stranding is the best way to help the distressed animal. It also provides biologists an opportunity to gather valuable data. Take photos from a safe distance and record as much information as you can. Please report the event by calling the Alaska Stranding Hotline at 1-877-925-7773.

1. Petersburg Fisheries

— A division of Iclicle Seafoods Inc. of Seattle. Pillings were driven in 1897 for a public dock, now the site of the cold storage. Icy Straits Packing Co. (Quadra Packing Co.), with Peter Buschmann as manager, built a sawmill where the Trading Union now stands to provide lumber for the cannery, which was completed in 1900. Icy Straits Packing Co. packed 32,750 cases of salmon that season. In 1901, they sold to Pacific Coast and Norway Packing Co. Pacific American Fisheries purchased it in 1929. PAF sold to Petersburg Fisheries Inc. in 1965. In 1977 they changed their corporate name to Iclicle Seafoods, with Petersburg Fisheries as a subsidiary. In June 2016, Cooke Aquaculture purchased Iclicle Seafoods.

Petersburg Fisheries celebrated their 50th Anniversary in 2015.

21. Clausen Memorial Museum and Museum Store — 203 Fram St. Opened in 1967, with the Heritage of the Sea addition added in 1976. Petersburg-Kupreanof area history and culture is represented by a diverse collection of business, social and cultural items. Special attractions include a Tlingit dugout canoe, the Cape Decision Lighthouse lens, fish-trap anchors, and a stuffed 126.5-pound king salmon. On the grounds is "Land, Sea and Sky," a wall piece designed and mounted by the Petersburg Arts and Crafts Guild in 1977. Call for more information. Handicapped-accessible. Phone 772-3598.

Turn right on Second Street and head south to Haugen Drive. Turn left on Haugen, heading 1/4 mile to Twelfth Street. A paved walking path runs parallel to Haugen Drive beginning at Eighth Street.

22. Hallingstad Peratrovich Center — Located on 12th Street, the building houses offices of the Petersburg Indian Association.

23. Mountain View Manor — Located on 12th Street off Haugen Drive. The borough-owned facility features a 48-unit apartment building for senior citizens. The grounds include beautiful flower gardens and landscaping. The building was doubled in size in 2004.

24. Petersburg Fire Hall — Petersburg's Fire Hall was completed in 2012 and is the headquarters for Petersburg's volunteer fire and EMS providers.

25. U.S. Post Office — Completed in 2000, the post office is open 24 hours for box holders. The post office window is open from 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays and 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Saturdays.

26. James A. Johnson Airport — Built in 1969. The first daily jet service started in June 1977 by Alaska Airlines. The Alaska Airlines terminal was remodeled and expanded in 1991. The former gravel runway was paved in 1982. Private plane tie-downs, fuel and aircraft maintenance, as well as helicopter and fixed-wing air service are available. Careful scrutiny in the area across from the airport reveals the remains of a three-plank boardwalk that people used to walk on to Sandy Beach over the muskeg before airport days.

Continue past the airport on Haugen Drive eventually turning left towards Frederick Sound.

27. Sandy Beach Recreation Area — Daytime picnic area. Low tides reveal abundant sea life and ancient petroglyphs and fish traps on the left-hand side toward the point. The petroglyphs probably mark a heart-shaped fish trap of long ago.

Beach access is available at the following locations:

PHS students track LeConte Glacier movement

LeConte Glacier, located 23 nautical miles southeast of Petersburg is perhaps the most studied glacier in the world. For 34 consecutive years retired Petersburg High School geology instructor Paul Bowen and current instructor Victor Trautman have accompanied student teams to the glacier to survey the face and track the glacier's movement.

The group plots the glacier's location the second week of May every year.

"It's probably one of the longest running high school surveys in the nation," says Trautman. He added that the survey data has been used several times in scientific publications and is also cited on the U.S. Forest Service website.

The glacier is on the mainland on the Horn Cliffs side of Frederick Sound. The snowfield above the glacier runs up the Stikine River valley. It has the distinction of being the southernmost active tidewater glacier in North America, often sending icebergs into Frederick Sound and onto beaches around Petersburg. In fact, the spring of 1998 saw the waters of Frederick Sound choked with bergs after a half-mile of ice from the glacier calved into the bay.

Trautman described LeConte Glacier as a tube of toothpaste. The more snow pack and weight that compresses the ice further up the valley, the more ice advances into the bay.

For the past decade, the face of the glacier has remained stable.

The face of the glacier has remained within an average distance of 92 yards of its 1999 position. Its farthest retreats were in the years 2001 and 2004 and its greatest advances were recorded in 1991, 2003 and 2005.

Each year, the survey readings determine the terminus, or ice base of the glacier. While the glacier hasn't moved significantly in recent years, its general tendency is to move forward with the spring melts, retreating again in the fall. LeConte has retreated approximately 1.2 miles since 1991.

In some places, students have measured ice as thick as 4,400 feet. "We're not going to run out of ice," Trautman laughed.

At the terminus, about 200 feet of ice rise above sea level, and 800 feet are hidden below the water line of the bay.

To collect the data, the group is split in two. The students stand at two pre-set spots that have been measured from each other. They then measure the distance from their points to various outcroppings across the glacier.

Using basic trigonometry, the group takes the data and plots out the glacier's face.

The students are an exclusive group, having had to apply for their positions in the glacier survey club. They spend a great deal of time honing their surveying skills before making the trip to the glacier, Trautman said.

Despite years of study, there is something else no one knows: The age of the oldest snowflake at the bottom of the glacier, Bowen said.

The annual survey trip for high school students teaches them more than glacial science. "It really gives them a practical application of math and science," Bowen said.

Projects of this type usually run out of funding before a long-term consistent body of data can be gathered. "That's what's so different about this project. It's been consistently supported by the school and by Temsco Helicopters since 1983," Trautman added.

The glacier also provides visitors with spectacular scenery close to town. Several charter boats based in Petersburg offer sightseeing trips to LeConte Bay, and flight seeing trips also are available for people who want to gaze across the ice field from above.

Bears may appear harmless, even cuddly, but keep a safe distance away.

To avoid bear encounters, make noise while hiking so the bears are aware of your presence. Photo courtesy of Carli Byrer.

Be cautious when encountering bears

On Mitkof Island, you're likely to see only black bears. But the larger and more aggressive brown bears occasionally have been spotted on the island.

While many bear stories are greatly exaggerated, it's smart to fear these furry mammals. Statistically, however, the likelihood of being injured by a bear in Alaska is about one-50th that of being injured in a car on a state highway. With proper precautions, the odds get even better.

The most important rule to follow is never feed the bears. In addition to it being illegal in Alaska, feeding bears can lead to injury – to you or the bear.

Cubs are cute and cuddly looking but potentially deadly because of their mother's protectiveness. If you see a bear cub in the woods, move away quickly because the mother will be somewhere nearby. Placing yourself, even inadvertently, between a sow and her cubs is virtually inviting the mother to attack.

Camping in bear country is a safe adventure if some simple rules are followed. Bears are attracted when food is left in accessible places.

Food should be stored and eaten separately from where you plan to sleep. It also should be packed separately from clothing in case of spills or leakage.

On other occasions, being a little noisy is a good idea. A surprised bear, especially one at close range, will often charge. Loud singing or talking is the simplest method of letting bears know you are there. Backpackers sometimes tie bells or a can of rocks to their packs.

If you come into close range of a bear, do not turn and run. Instead, back away slowly, without making sudden movements that could frighten the bear.

Startled bears often make a "whoosh" or "woof" sound as they turn to run. If a bear runs away, don't be alarmed. If a bear stands its ground and begins a series of woofs or teeth-popping, this is your invitation to leave, since the bear may charge.

More information on Alaska's bears is available from the Petersburg Police Department, the U.S. Forest Service, the Visitor Information Center and the Alaska Department of Fish and Game.

This type of trap is unique to a 40-mile area around Petersburg. They are found nowhere else in the world. (Drawing courtesy U.S. Forest Service.)

Sandy Beach fish traps found nowhere else in the world

While the modern town of Petersburg has over 100 years of history under its belt, it is very young in comparison to the Native presence on the island.

U.S. Forest Service archaeologists often lead tours through the vast collection of artifacts located near town, which include six rock and wooden fish traps.

The oldest of the remnants dates back 2,090 years when, archaeologists believe, the tribe of Tlingits built two traps of stone, one on either side of Sandy Beach. The traps are over thirty feet across and all that is showing, during an average low tide nowadays, is a heart-shaped pattern of rocks pointing toward the water with a row of rocks leading the fish into the top of the heart

Fish traps were in use throughout Alaskan waters until they were banned in 1959. Fish swam into a funnel-like structure of nets hanging from floating logs and were captured in the traps. Cannery tenders tied up next to the pens and brailed or scooped fish into the tenders for transport back to the canneries. Illustration by G.T. Sundstrom in Commercial Gear of the United States, Fish and Wildlife Circular 109.

in a V-shape. The theory is that fish that swam in near the beach at high tide would be funneled into the heart-shaped traps, which might have been three to four feet high, and would be unable to escape with the ebbing tide. The Tlingits probably then speared the trapped fish and brought them up the beach to be cleaned.

Later traps at Sandy Beach began to use wooden stakes as well as the rocks piled up for trap walls. The Tlingits eventually constructed all wooden traps. Wooden stakes preserved by the anaerobic conditions in the fine, wet sand still remain in the heart and V-shaped patterns.

Fishing and ‘catching,’ is the Petersburg way of life

Petersburg is home port for approximately 600 commercial fishing vessels. Petersburg fishermen hold over 1000 fishing permits for a variety of fisheries conducted statewide.

Following is an illustration of how various fisheries are conducted.

Longliners

Bottom dwelling fish such as halibut and black cod are caught much the same way — with long lengths of line — hence the name longliners — using a series of hooks strung out across the ocean floor.

Seiners

While trollers and gillnet-

ters use just one or two-man crews, seiners usually have four or more on deck and one piloting a skiff. They catch large quantities of salmon, mostly pink salmon — called humpies — the primary product in the canned salmon market.

Once a school of fish is found, fishermen set out the open net with the skiff towing one end off the stern of the seiner and the seiner motoring away holding the other. After a short period the two boats close in a circle and close, or ‘purse’ the seine, trapping the salmon.

Seine boats are typically 58-feet in length and among the largest vessels in the harbor. They can be spotted by the power skiff in the back and the net, with corks and lead line, piled in the stern.

Seiners

Longliners

Trollers

Five types of Pacific salmon are caught in the region: kings (or Chinook), Coho (silvers), sockeye (reds), humpies (pinks) and chums (dogs). Kings, or Chinook, are the big money fish, caught primarily by trollers who run multi-hook lines from poles lowered out over the water as the vessels move through the fishing grounds.

Trollers also catch silvers or coho, which usually bring a good price and return to their spawning grounds somewhat later in the season than kings. Trollers should not mistakenly be called ‘trawlers.’

Gillnetters

Gillnetters target sockeye (reds), chums (dogs) and occasionally Coho (silvers). In this region, gillnetters use 150-fathom driftnets. The nets are set and as fish swim into them, they become tangled and are pulled into the boat. Gillnetting can become an art form as fishermen constantly work the net to keep them from tangling in seaweed, logs, or on the rocks.

Gillnet fish are sold for restaurant and specialty use. Their price per-pound is higher than that of seine-caught fish, but not quite as high as troll-caught salmon.

Gillnet boats can be spotted by the hydraulic reel at the rear of the boat. The reel is used to free-wheel out the net while setting and to wind in the nets that catch salmon. There are roughly 86 permits in Petersburg.

Crabbers

Crews of two or more use pots weighing around 45-pounds for dungeness crab, and over 500-pounds for the tanner and king crab (red, blue, or golden) fisheries. Crab boats use booms and power blocks to lower and raise the heavy crab pots to the ocean floor, marking the location of their pots with buoys. Pots contain bait jars to attract their crustacean prey. Fresh crab and 'live-crab' have become a 'must-have' for restaurants worldwide and Alaskan crab are rated as the finest.

Dive Fisheries

Dive fishermen are the newest kids on the block, marketing wise, but also some of the most talented and ingenious. Swimming down in scuba gear (or sometimes with umbilical diving gear) and often among sea lions, sea otters, and other aquatic life, dive fishers have targeted Abalone, Sea Cucumber, Geoducks and Sea Urchins in the past. The species are plucked from between rocks or sandy sea floors and placed in bags, buckets, or netting and raised to the surface.

 ick Sound. Petersburg Indian Association has upgraded portions of the trail to be handicapped accessible.

Raven Trail
[3 1/2 hours one way]
Strenuous

The trail can be accessed by a new trailhead across the street from Sandy Beach Park. The beginning of the Raven Trail is gravel and connects to a Borough Service Road for a distance of 1/2-mile. Across the service road, the trail continues for another 4.1 miles. About half of the trail is boardwalk and other parts have somewhat steep sections that are a good workout.

The view from the top offers outstanding views of Petersburg, Frederick Sound and Wrangell Narrows. The Trail accesses the Raven's Roost Cabin.

HIKES OUT THE ROAD

Blind River Rapids Boardwalk

[30 minutes round trip]

Easy

Located 14 miles from downtown on Mitkof Highway, this trail leads to one of the most popular fishing spots in the area.

The trailhead sign is highly visible from the road. A large parking lot can accommodate motor homes. The boardwalk to the rapids is approximately one-quarter-mile long, and the loop is one-half-mile. The trail passes through a muskeg bog before reaching the popular fishing hole at the rapids.

Restrooms are provided near the parking lot, and a shelter is available near the trail's end. Handicapped accessible.

Man Made Hole

[20 minutes]

Easy

Enjoy a quiet stroll in the woods around the swimming hole off Mitkof Highway at mile 20. Handicapped-accessible. Restroom and a picnic shelter are available.

Ohmer Creek Trail

[1 hour from Woodpecker Road to Snake Ridge Road]

Easy to moderate

Located off Mitkof Highway at mile 21.5. This one-mile trail is adjacent to the Ohmer Creek Campground, and follows Ohmer Creek through mature rain forest and muskeg and over a beaver pond.

The first quarter-mile of the trail is wheelchair-accessible and accesses a fishing platform and the second part of the trail is plank and native tread. The trail provides anglers with access to the creek and adjacent ponds, providing fair to good trout and salmon fishing in late summer and fall.

Three Lakes Loop

Trail and Ideal Cove Trail

[30 minutes from the trailhead to any one

lake; two hours from the

Crane Lake trailhead to

the Sand Lake trailhead]

Easy

This trail is located 21 miles from downtown off Mitkof Highway.

To get there, drive past Crystal Lake Hatchery onto the road, past Man-made Hole and take the first left onto Three Lakes Loop Road. The total length of the Three Lakes trails and Ideal Cove Trail is about 5.4 miles. Wildflowers and berries abound along most of the trail and all four lakes offer trout fishing.

Rowboats and picnic tables provided at all three lakes.

An Adirondack shelter is provided at a small lake between Sand and Hill Lakes. Rowboats, fishing platforms, and picnic tables are available at all three lakes.

cessible only by boat or kayak.

Hikers have a choice of getting onto the boardwalk trail at two separate locations: Kupreanof State Dock trailhead for a 10.5-mile hike, or the high tide trailhead up Petersburg Creek for a 6.5-mile hike. Both trails follow the creek, with access to trout and salmon fishing, wildflower meadows and great opportunities for photographers.

The wilderness portion of the trail has primitive construction and can be challenging to even experienced hikers. Hikers are advised to contact the Petersburg Ranger District on trail conditions prior to hiking.

The trail also traverses a portion of the Petersburg Creek and Duncan Salt Chuck Wilderness.

The Petersburg Lake Cabin, located at the end of the hike is available for rent from the Petersburg Ranger District.

Petersburg Mountain Trail [Six hours round trip] Difficult

To get to the trailhead, boat across the Wrangell Narrows from Petersburg to the Kupreanof State Dock.

To the north (right), the trail goes to Petersburg Mountain. The trail extends 3.5 miles one-way. The first mile is an easy walk through the community of Kupreanof. The trail climbs fairly steeply for the next 2.5 miles to the saddle.

The last quarter-mile is a very steep scramble over rocks to the 2,750-foot summit, which provides one of the best views of Petersburg, coastal mountains and glaciers.

Veteran walker Susan Erickson and U.S. Forest Service staff contributed to this article.

Researchers let lighthouse visitors listen underwater

Humpback whales feeding in Frederick Sound during summer months can be seen and heard via streaming recordings of whale vocals made possible by a research grant.

Thanks to a Scenic Byway grant allotted to the Juneau Lighthouse Association, whale-watchers visiting the Five Finger Lighthouse now have the option to listen to live underwater sounds. A hydrophone connected to a swinging mooring is outfitted with a converted whitewater kayak, which supplies the battery power to a transmitter sending wireless signal to a receiver located in the lighthouse tower. Eventually, the goal is to have recordings streaming online so that people anywhere can listen.

The grant allowed student-researcher Dawn Barlow, an unpaid intern from Pitzer College in Los Angeles, to spend the summer in Southeast conducting field research for her senior thesis. Her goal was to monitor for whale vocalizations in the region and classify how the acoustic behavior varies with environmental conditions. She was also in charge of archiving incoming sounds and making them available for visitors.

Barlow worked under the supervision of Dr. Fred Sharpe, a founding member of the Alaska Whale Foundation.

The abundance of krill and small school herring keep plenty of whales swimming around the island where Five Finger Lighthouse stands. Some even feed within a few yards of the shore.

During the summer, Barlow logged over 480 hours of underwater recordings.

The Juneau Lighthouse Association provided Barlow with a room, in addition to an office and workbench space. She received some support for food from the Scenic Byways grant, and grant money from her university's science department helped her pay for travel to and from Alaska.

Scenic Byway grant money also went toward creating and installing interpretive signs to showcase the unique history of the lighthouse. Volunteers are always welcome and needed to help with maintenance and improvements on the island during summers. Monetary donations are also accepted and greatly appreciated.

"Five Finger Lighthouse is going through a re-birth as a center for public visitation, education and research. I am excited to be a part of that," Paul Sharpe said. Paul and Fred are brothers and both have spent time together on the island.

Anyone wanting more information can contact Paul at p.sharpe@comcast.net.

Sailors' luck is steeped in superstitions

Fishermen, like many who depend on nature have a laundry list of superstitions and rules that are enforced on-board their boats.

Some are based upon the Bible. For example, since Christ was crucified on Friday, boats would not depart on that day. Sunday, however, is the best day to commence a voyage, because Christ's resurrection on that day is seen as a good omen. The adage is: 'Sunday sail, never fail.'

Fishermen would throw pocket change or canned goods overboard in the hope that the "hook-on men" (those who had died at sea) would lend a hand and put fish on their gear.

When a gillnet was pulled up with only one fish it, fishermen called it, "getting the skunk off the deck." Future catches they believed, would certainly improve.

Other boat myths are:

Split Pea Soup — When served on board, a southwest wind was sure to blow.

Whistling — "Whistlin' up a westerly," was believed possible when persons whistled on deck. A fierce westerly storm gale is a much-feared storm at sea.

Horses — Don't mention them when on board. Call them long faces or long-ears if you must talk of them. Some skip-pers forbade horse clams coming on deck.

Buckets — Don't leave a full bucket of water on deck. Deck buckets are normally turned upside down. Hatch covers on the other hand are not turned upside down.

Women — For centuries it was believed that women had no place at sea. A ship could be doomed by having the fairer sex aboard and furthermore they would distract the men from their duties. A naked woman however, according to ancient lore, could calm the seas. Thus the reason many vessels have a bare breasted figurehead at the bow.

Bananas — Long considered bad luck, the yellow skinned fruit is not to be brought aboard. They are believed to be the cause of everything from spider bites to causing ships to disappear. Pouring wine on the deck will bring good luck on a long voyage and is considered an appreciated libation for the gods.

Dolphins — Dolphins swimming with the ship are a good omen while sharks following, are a sign of inevitable death.

Black Cats — Black cats are considered lucky while flowers are not. Flowers are used for funeral wreaths.

Cutting your nails or hair at sea is forbidden and never step-aboard a ship with your left foot. When stirring a pot or coiling a line, it must always be done in a clockwise direction.

Another mariner myth is that sailors pierced their ears to improve their eyesight and wearing a gold earring was both a charm against drowning, as well as payment to Davy Jones to enter the next world should a sailor die at sea.

With time, this list of superstitions has withered in the modern world and some fishermen scoff at them.

"A lot of people joke about them, but if they can avoid doing those things, they will," noted a longtime descendant of a Petersburg fishing family.

Rainy days, mild temperatures

Petersburg has average recorded temperatures of 53.6 degrees in June, 58.3 degrees in July and 57.4 degrees in August, according to National Weather Service data.

Despite being wetter than normal, the summer was reflective of Petersburg's typical weather patterns which bring a lot of rain. The average annual rainfall for the area is about 130 inches according to data from the National Weather Service. Compare that to an annual average of just 15 inches in Anchorage or 11.3 inches in Fairbanks and the weather in Petersburg may look inhospitable.

But the same ocean conditions that bring in all the moisture also moderate the temperatures. This makes for mild winters and cool summers. Even in the coldest month, January, temperatures rarely fall below freezing.

People who live in this climate adapt. The essential piece of rain gear, either on sea or land, is a good pair of rubber boots, sometimes called "Petersburg sneakers." Style takes a back seat to the comfort of dry feet, and it is not out of place to wear these brownish-red boots on almost any occasion.

On the other hand, umbrellas are uncommon, and serious outdoor work or play is more comfortable in a good waterproof rain jacket and rain pants.
