THIS BEAUTIFULLY APPOINTED FAMILY HOME on a quiet Atlanta street didn't start out as Shayelyn Woodbery's dream home. The turnkey house was being built as a business project between Shayelyn, an interior designer, and her husband, David, a developer and founder of The Woodbery Group. Eventually overcome by the charms of the neighborhood and the lot's lush one-acre setting, the couple decided midconstruction to turn the house into a personalized home for their family of four.

Now tasked with creating a more meaningful space, Shayelyn knew just where to look for ideas. Having recently traveled to Morocco for her and David's wedding anniversary, she began to pore over photos from their visit to the exotic destination. "I was really moved on the trip, almost in a spiritual manner," she recalls. "People often associate Morocco with vibrant, punchy color, but I was more taken by all the ancestral patterns. There's a wonderful simplicity to them."

“SOFT AND SIMPLE COLORS CREATE A SENSE OF CALM WHILE ALLOWING A ROOM’S MORE INTERESTING ELEMENTS TO SHINE.”
