Publishing to Auth0 Marketplace

When the time comes and you're ready to submit an integration for the Auth0 team to review, here's what to expect for the process.

There are 4 items to submit:

1. The overview listing page (business + marketing content).

2. Send Redirect Action code (or the code and configuration for the integration) via JS file or Github, Bitbucket, etc. Those work as well.

3. An installation guide written in Markdown format.

4. Testing demo accounts and notes (if needed).

Once an integration is submitted, it typically takes 1-2 weeks for the team to review. From there, you will receive any feedback, suggestions, questions and next steps. You'll also be provided with a preview of the integration listing before it goes live.

Best practices when submitting your integration:

- Make sure all relevant fields are filled out; including the privacy policy URL, terms of use, support URL or relevant email address.

- The integration name should support the use case it is solving, along with the name of your organization.

- While including 3 value props isn't required, we highly recommend adding this to help customers better understand your solution.

- Make sure to send the correct sizes for your logos and icons.
