Overview

We have one of the most severe labor shortages ever experienced in nursing and healthcare. Staff turnover and vacancy rates have skyrocketed even in the best health systems. The current nursing care delivery models rely on the availability of many nurses and are unsustainable. The gap between the number of nurses needed to practice primary nursing and the number of nurses available cannot be effectively bridged even with a significant ramp-up in enrollments and certainly not in a cost-effective way.

The transition to a team or collaborative care model is challenging despite the need. Nursing leaders know they will need to do this but are not sure where to start. As part of this strategic planning package, we will help to jump-start your leadership team's efforts. We will provide guidance in the redesign process and the infrastructure needed to ensure success.
