WE MADE IT!!

Well, you can see from our front page that we ignored the weather and the warnings so that we could keep our promise to conduct our most difficult Memorial Day Honor Ceremony so far.

The plan was to carry the Prayer Box in the Absecon Memorial Day parade and then march it to the boat ramp a few miles away. Once at the waters edge, we got "feet wet" and floated our combat rubber raiding craft for the long ten mile row across the bay.

Against our wishes, mother nature opened up on us few times with hard rain and then some hail. Also throwing a wrench into the works was the fact that a large amount of dredging equipment had been placed in our way in the days just prior to our event requiring us to paddle even farther to go around.

The storm carried strong winds which fought us the whole way. The tide also refused to change and at some points we just paddled intensely without any forward movement for quite some time.

We had planned for the trip across the bay to take three hours but it ended up taking five and a half.

At one point the storm drove us into the marsh at the center of the bay were we had to improvise a way to get the boat clear and some of us had to be pulled from deep mud that trapped us.

It was a tough and extremely challenging event but it means more to us that way. The fallen heroes we honor deserve it.

Why did non-slaveholding Southerners fight in the Civil War? Like so many Americans, I had relatives who fought and died on both sides of the war, many brother against brother opposing each other on the same battlefield. But the question is rarely discussed. The short answer to this question is the election of Abraham Lincoln, a Republican who strongly opposed slavery.

Lincoln's position was both clear and a direct threat to the culture of the South. It is easy to see why slave owners saw Lincoln as a threat. But what about Southerners who did not own slaves?

Why risk their livelihoods by pledging to a new nation grounded in promoting slavery? We need to understand that slaves did not just work on the plantations. They touched every aspect of the South's social, political, and economic life. Slaves cleaned the streets, toiled as bricklayers, carpenters, blacksmiths, bakers, dockhands, and laborers, and they cooked the meals, cleaned, raised the children, and tended to the daily chores. As well, Southerners were increasingly isolated as Northern states demanded an immediate end to slavery. By the late 1850s, most white Southerners viewed themselves as condemned by what they saw as a hysterical slavery abolition movement. The message to all Southerners, including those who were non-slaveholders, was that the entire South was in danger. This clash of cultures came to a head in 1861 when, on April 14, Confederate General P.G.T. Beauregard's forces forced the surrender of Fort Sumpter's Union garrison. By this time, several states had already seceded from the Union, and Confederate militias had begun seizing United States forts and property.

Born in Chambersburg, PA, to the late Rose (DuVall) Snyder and Raymond T. Yeager, he graduated from Chambersburg High School in 1964. After high school, Ray started his military career. He served 2 tours in Vietnam in the US Air Force from 1965-1969, then came back to the states to finish out his career with the Air National Guard. Ray was an avid sharpshooter. He won many medals and awards throughout his military career including the Distinguished Rifleman Badge. The Armed Forces adopted this program around the same time. Once fully retired from the military, Ray enjoyed being outside, fixing cars, and being a handyman. He loved to build things. Join us as we support each other and learn more about the grief process from Journey Hospice's chaplain and bereavement counselor, Carol Hutchison, and social worker, Madeline Martinez.

Journey Hospice hosts various veteran cafés throughout South Jersey. Each café is a VETERAN place where local veterans meet to socialize and reminisce about their time serving
