iii) by the willful intention of the injured employee to bring about the injury or death of him or herself or of another.

iv) for the purpose of this Chapter, an accident resulting in incapacity or death of an employee shall be deemed to arise out of and in the course of employment notwithstanding that the employee was, at the time when the accident happened, acting in contravention of statutory or other rule applicable to his or her employment or of any orders given by or on behalf of their employer or that they were acting without instructions from their employer if such act was done by the employee for the purposes of and in connection with their employer's trade or business.

v) when an accident happens to an employee during any temporary interruption of his or her work for a meal or for rest or refreshment, the accident shall be deemed to arise out of and in the course of his or her employment if the accident would have been deemed so to have arisen had it happened at the place of employment and if:

(1) the accident happens upon premises occupied by the employer; or (2) the accident happens upon premises to which the employee has by virtue of his or her employment the right of access during that temporary interruption of his work; or

(3) the accident happens upon premises to which the worker is permitted to resort during that temporary interruption of his work by the express or implied authorization of his employer.

§ 31.2 Compensation for death

- a) When an employee dies as the consequence of a compensable occupational injury, compensation shall be paid as set forth in this section.
- b) If the deceased employee leaves any dependents wholly dependent upon his or her earnings, the amount of compensation shall be a sum equal to 48 months' earning.
- c) If the deceased employee leaves no dependents who are wholly dependent, but only dependents who are partially dependent on his or her earnings, the Ministry shall award such compensation as it shall, after hearing representations by all interested persons, deem just, which compensation shall not be less than 20 per cent nor more than 80 per cent of the amount which would be awarded under paragraph b).
- d) If the deceased employee leaves no dependents, the employer shall provide a coffin and pay any other reasonable funeral expenses not in excess of $50.00. He or she shall also be liable for any expenses set forth in section § 31.6 which have been incurred in consequence of the accident which caused the decedent's death.
- e) If a deceased employee was, prior to his or her death, compensated for incapacity resulting from the occupational injury which subsequently caused his or her death, the amount of such compensation paid shall be deducted from the amount of compensation due under this section.
- f) Compensation shall be paid in the manner set forth in section § 33.9.
- g) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph d), the employer shall, in every case to which this section is applicable, provide his or her coffin and $50.00 for the funeral expenses of his or her deceased employee; and in every case he or she shall pay the reasonable medical expenses, if any, incurred in connection with the deceased employee's injury which resulted in his or her death, in accordance with the provisions of section § 31.6.

- b) In the case of temporary partial disability resulting in decreased earnings, the compensation shall be 60 per cent of the difference between the injured employee's daily earnings before the injury and his or her wages earned after the injury in the same or another employment available to him or her until he or she is granted medical approval to return to his or her regular employment.
- c) In the case of temporary total disability, the compensation shall be 60 per cent of the injured employee's average daily earnings before the accident.
- d) Compensation for temporary disability shall be paid in the manner provided in section § 33.9 b), provided, however, that compensation for temporary disability may be in the form of a lump sum calculated on the basis of the probable duration of the disability and its probable change in degree during that period, upon agreement of employer and employee within the presence of a labour inspector and an authorized representative of the a registered trade union.

§ 31.4 Compensation for permanent partial disability

- a) When an employee suffers permanent partial disability as the consequence of a compensable occupational injury, compensation shall be paid on the basis of loss of earning capacity as set forth in this section.
- b) In the case of a permanent partial disability, the amount of the compensation that shall be paid the injured employee shall be based on the formula set opposite the injury listed in Schedule A, attached.
- c) In case of a permanent partial disability of a member or limb that does not involve the loss of such member or limb, the compensation shall be commensurate with the proportional loss of earning capacity, but not exceeding 50 per cent of the lump sum payment for that member or limb as appears in Schedule A; provided, however, that total permanent loss of a member or limb shall be compensated on the basis of the loss of such member or limb.
- d) When more than one injury is caused by the same accident, the amount of compensation payable under the provisions of this section shall be aggregated, but in no case shall the total compensation payable exceed that payable for permanent total disability.

§ 31.5 Compensation for permanent total disability

- a) When an employee suffers permanent total disability as the consequence of a compensable occupational injury, the compensation therefore shall be an amount equal to 48 months average earnings.
- b) When a compensable occupational injury results in permanent total incapacity of such a nature that the injured employee requires the help and attention of another person, the Ministry may direct the payment of additional compensation not to exceed $500.00 of the amount payable under paragraph a
- c) Compensation shall be paid in the manner set forth in section § 33.9.
- d) If the injured or deceased employee worked for the same employer at substantially the same kind of work for a year, his or her average monthly earnings shall be computed by dividing his or her annual earnings by 12, and their average weekly earnings shall be computed by dividing his or her annual earnings by 52. Daily earnings shall in such case be computed by dividing the average weekly earnings by the average number of days worked per week.
- e) If the injured or deceased employee did not work for the same employer at substantially the same kind of work for a year, his or her earnings shall be based on the average earnings which, during the twelve months prior to the injury, were earned by a person in the same grade, class, or district, employed at the same work by the same employer.
- f) Any excess of earning over four hundred dollars per month shall not be taken into account in computing compensation benefits.

§ 31.6 Liability for medical treatment

- a) The employer shall promptly provide for any injured employee such reasonable medical, surgical, or other attendance or treatment, nurse and hospital service, medicine, crutches, and apparatus for such period as the nature of the injury or the process of recovery may require. b) The liability of an employer for medical treatment as herein provided shall not be affected by the fact that his or her employee was injured through the fault or negligence of a third party not in the same employ; the employer shall, however, have a cause of action against such third party to recover any amounts paid by him or her for such medical treatment, as provided in section § 33.11.

§ 32.2 Compensation for death

§ 32.3 Compensation for permanent total disability

§ 32.4 Calculation of average earnings

§ 32.5 Liability for medical treatment

Schedule A. Permanent Partial Disability

§ 32.1 Liability for compensation

a) Every employer shall in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter pay, or provide compensation or secure compensation to each employee (or his or her dependents) for the disability or death of such employee caused by any occupational disease as if such disease were a personal injury by accident arising out of and in the course of that employment; provided, however, that the liability for compensation created by this section shall be limited by the revisions of paragraphs c) and d).

b) An occupational disease is one which is due to causes and conditions which are characteristic of and peculiar to a particular trade, occupation, process, or employment, to which an employee is not ordinarily subjected or exposed outside of or away from his or her employment.

c) Liability for compensation under this section shall be limited to disability which commences or death which occurs (if it is not preceded by incapacity) within 2 years after termination of the employee's employment which is alleged to have caused the disability or death, or 5 years after the termination of the employment if the disability or death is alleged to be due to exposure to radium, ionized particles, other radioactive substances or other forms of radiant energy, or X-rays (roentgen rays).

d) There shall be no liability for compensation under this section unless the employee has been employed for a period sufficient in duration in the opinion of experts, for him or her to have contracted the occupational disease alleged to have caused his or her disability or death.

§ 32.2 Compensation for death

When an employee dies as the consequence of a compensable occupational disease, compensation shall be paid as set forth in section § 31.2 for death due to compensable occupational injury, and the provisions of that section shall apply with any necessary modification to occupational disease.

§ 32.3 Compensation for permanent total disability

When an employee suffers permanent total disability as the consequence of a compensable occupational disease, compensation shall be paid as set forth in section § 31.5 for permanent total disability due to compensable occupational injury, and the provisions of that section shall apply with any necessary modification to occupational disease.

§ 32.4 Calculation of average earnings

The calculation of average earnings for the purpose of determining compensation due under sections § 32.2 and § 32.33 shall be made in the same manner as the calculation of average earnings in section § 31.5, and the provisions of that section shall apply with any necessary modification to calculation of average earnings in case of occupational disease.

§ 32.5 Liability for medical treatment

a) When an employee suffers any disability, as a consequence of compensable occupational, disease, the employer shall be liable for medical treatment as defined in and to the extent required by section § 31.6 a) for occupational injuries; and the provisions of that section shall apply with any necessary modification to occupational disease.

b) The liability of an employer for medical treatment as herein provided shall not be affected by the fact that his or her employee was disabled as a consequence of his or her employment by occupational disease through the fault or negligence of a third party not in the same employ; the employer shall, however, have a cause of action against such third party to recover any amounts paid by him or her for such medical treatment, as provided in section § 33.11.

§ 33.1 Notice of injury or disease; application for compensation

a) In order to be entitled to receive compensation for disability or death resulting from an occupational injury or disease, the employee shall give timely notice of the occurrence of the injury or disease to the employer allegedly liable for the compensation or to his or her agent. Timely notice shall be considered to mean within 60 days of the occurrence which caused the disability or death unless the Ministry shall find that a longer period was justified under the circumstances. The requirement of notice to the employer or his or her agent shall be deemed satisfied if notice is given to any supervisory official of the employer. If an employee suffers death or disability as a consequence of an occupational disease, and he or she has worked during the period specified in section § 32.1 c) for several employers in the kind of employment which is alleged to have caused the disease, notice to any one such employer shall be sufficient. It shall be the duty of the employer to whom notice was given to notify the other employers who may be liable for compensation; and if he or she fails to give such notice, he or she shall be liable for all compensation awarded for the death or disability of the employee.

b) The notice to the employer shall be in writing, or shall be reduced to writing by the employer or his or her agent. It shall give the name and address of the employee who has been disabled or has died and shall state in ordinary language the cause of the injury and the place and date of same or the description of the disease and any information available as to its onset. Notice may be given by the employee personally or by a member of his or her family or by a friend on his or her behalf; or, if the employee is deceased, by any of his or her dependents or by a person acting on their behalf.

c) Failure to give such notice or intentional and willful misstatement of essential information shall excuse the employer from his or her liability to pay compensation under this Chapter; provided, however, that the want of, or any defect or inaccuracy in such notice shall not excuse the employer from his or her liability for compensation under this Chapter if he or she is proved to have had knowledge of the injury or disease from any other source at or about the time of its occurrence or if it is determined at proceedings held under the provisions of this Chapter that the employer is not or would not be (if a notice or amended notice were then given and the proceedings adjourned for a reasonable period) prejudiced in his or her defiance by the want, defect, or inaccuracy of such notice or that such want defect or inaccuracy was due to mistake or other reasonable cause (including the absence of the employee from the country or from the vicinity of the employer's premises at the time of the onset of an occupational disease).

d) Notice of death of an employee given in accordance with the provisions of this section shall be deemed to constitute an application for compensation, and notice of disability may also so serve; but the Ministry of Labour may by regulation determine under what circumstances a separate application for compensation shall be made, the form and contents of such application, and the time for service upon the employer. The provisions of paragraph c) above shall apply with any necessary modification to every application for compensation.

§ 33.2 Notification of labour inspectors

a) The employer shall be responsible for notifying a labour inspector as soon as possible of all occupational injuries or disease suffered by his or her employees (of which he or she has received notice or other knowledge).

b) If an employee is killed or very seriously injured (so that permanent, total or almost total disability is likely to result) or if there is an accident in which a large number of employees are injured or if a large number of employees appear to be suffering from the same disease, (and there is any evidence that it is an occupational disease), the employer shall immediately notify the nearest labour inspector.

c) In all other cases it shall be sufficient, if there is no labour inspector in the vicinity, for the employer to make a complete and accurate record of all cases of occupational injury or disease suffered by his or her employees and to submit a true copy of such record to the Ministry of Labour at such intervals or to an inspector on his or her regular tour of inspection, as the Ministry may by regulation require.

§ 33.3 Settlement of claims for temporary disability

a) When an employer receives an application which is made by or on behalf of an employee for compensation for temporary disability and it appears that no permanent disability is involved, he or she shall immediately make a record thereof in duplicate.

b) In all cases comprehended by this section the employer or his or her agent and the employee (or some person who is authorized to represent him or her) shall discuss the claim and determine the amount, if any, which they believe required by law to be paid as compensations. The employer shall record such agreement, if any, and the reasons therefore on the application for compensation or in an annexure to such application; and the employer and the employee shall date and sign such agreement.

c) Every such agreement may be reviewed by the labour inspector on his or her regular tour of inspection. If he or she determines that the employee understands his or her rights generally and the terms of the agreement and that he or she has freely consented to such terms, the inspector shall approve same unless he or she finds serious errors of fact or law or bad faith on the part of either party. If he or she approves the agreement, he or she shall so indicate in writing on the agreement, the original of which shall be attached to the permanent record of the claim. If he or she does not approve, the labour inspector shall submit the claim to the Ministry for review, forwarding to the Ministry a true copy of the entire record, along with his or her observations and recommendations.

d) If the employer and the employee cannot agree as to the compensation due, the positions of each party shall be summarized in an annexure to the application and the record shall be preserved for consideration by the labour inspector upon his or her regular tour of inspection; provided, however, that if the inspector is not due for more than two months, the record shall, at the employee's request, be forwarded to the Ministry for its consideration in the first instance. In every case in which the employer and the employee agree that compensation is due, but differ as to the amount, the record shall show such partial agreement, and the employer shall pay compensation to the extent that there is agreement, leaving for consideration by the inspector only the questions whether additional compensation is due, and, if so, how much.

e) In case of disagreement preserved for consideration by the labour inspector, he or she shall call together the employer and the employee for a discussion of the claim. If an agreement is reached, and the inspector approves it, he or she shall record same in an annexure to the application for compensation; and the agreement shall be dated and signed by all participants in the discussion. If the agreement is reached by a person acting on behalf of the employee, the inspector shall ensure that the agreement is explained to the employee, and that he or she agrees thereto. If no agreement is reached, the inspector may propose a settlement of the claim; if the parties agree thereto, it shall be treated as an agreement reached in the preceding provisions of this paragraph. If no agreement can be reached, the labour inspector shall submit the case to the Ministry, forwarding to the Ministry a true copy of the entire record, along with his or her observations and recommendation.

§ 33.4 Settlement of claims for permanent disability

a) In any case in which immediate notification of an inspector is required by section § 33.2§ 33.3 b) on account of serious injury to an employee, the inspector shall make an investigation of the accident which caused the injury. He or she shall submit to the Ministry his or her observations, depositions of witnesses and other documentary evidence reduced to writing, the examining physician's report, the statements of the employer and of the employee, and a true copy of the permanent record of the claim. The Ministry shall act as quickly as possible upon this record and the information furnished by the labour inspector in accordance with the provisions of section § 33.7.

b) In every other case of apparent permanent disability the employer shall immediately call in a labour inspector, if there is one present in the vicinity; and the labour inspector shall make an investigation of the circumstances leading to the injury or disease which caused the disability. He or she shall make recommendations to the employer and to the employee (or to their representatives) as to the compensation required to be paid pursuant to the provisions of this Chapter, based on the results of his or her investigations and the applicable statutory provisions. If the labour inspector's recommendations are accepted by the employer and by the employee, he or she shall report same to the Ministry. Along with the materials required to be submitted under paragraph a) and the written agreement of the employer and the employee.

c) If the labour inspector's recommendations, as originally made or as amended upon full discussion with the employer and the employee, are not accepted by both, the claim shall be submitted to the Ministry, along with the labour inspector's recommendation and the other materials required to be submitted under paragraph a); provided, however, that in the case of partial agreement, the employer shall pay compensation to the employee to the maximum amount agreed upon until the Ministry makes a determination. The Ministry shall act upon the claim in the manner set forth in section § 33.7.

d) In every other case of apparent permanent disability when there is no labour inspector available in the vicinity, the employer shall, as of the date that compensation first becomes due, pay the maximum compensation for which he or she admits liability to the disabled employee in the form of weekly payments (unless otherwise provided in section § 33.9, and he or she shall make a permanent record thereof, which shall be annexed to the claim for compensation. Upon arrival of the labour inspector on his or her regular tour of inspection or otherwise, the claim shall be presented to him or her, and he or she shall make an investigation and proceed as provided in paragraph b); provided however, that any payments made by the employer prior to the inspector's investigation and recommendations shall be credited against the total compensation due.

§ 33.5 Settlement of claims for death

In every case of death caused by occupational injury or disease, the employer shall immediately notify a labour inspector, as provided in section § 33.2 b). The inspector shall investigate the circumstances leading to the injury or disease and shall also attempt to determine whether the deceased employee had dependents, if any, and the degree of dependency of each. He or she shall make a determination of the compensation due and the persons entitled to receive same; he or she shall submit to the Ministry with his or her determination, his or her observation, depositions of witnesses and other documentary evidence or evidence reduced to writing, the physician's or coroner's report, if any, the statement of the employer and of the decedent's dependents, any protest against this determination, and a true copy of the permanent record of the claim. The Ministry shall act on this record and the other information furnished by the inspector in accordance with section § 33.7 f).

§ 33.6 Medical examination, treatment of disabled

a) The employer may require any employee who claims compensation for disability resulting from occupational injury or disease to submit to an examination by a physician at a place and time reasonably convenient to the employee. If a disabled employee refuses, without just cause, to submit to such examination, the employer shall not be required to pay the compensation otherwise required by the provisions of this Chapter. The physician's report shall form a part of the permanent record of the case.

b) The dependents of an employee who is alleged to have died as the consequence of a compensable injury or disease shall be required, at the request of the employer, to permit a physician to examine the body of their decedent and certify the cause of death; provided, however, that such examination is timely made. If such permission is refused without just cause, the employer shall not be required to pay the compensation otherwise required by the provisions of this Chapter. If no physician is available, the coroner may, notwithstanding any other provision of law, be called to conduct an inquest into the death of any employee alleged to have resulted from occupational injury or disease; and the coroner shall be entitled to be paid his or her regular fees from public funds for performing such duty. The certificate of the physician or of the coroner as to the cause of death shall form a part of the permanent record of the case.

c) Whenever a physician who examines an employee allegedly disabled as a result of a compensable occupational injury or disease prescribes treatment to arrest the disability or to rehabilitate the employee, it shall be the duty of such employee to follow such treatment to the best of his or her ability; and failure or refusal so to do, without just cause, shall justify the employer in refusing to pay the compensation otherwise required by this Chapter; provided, however, that the employer shall be required to supply the drugs, appliances, or equipment, required to carry out such prescribed treatment, as provided in sections § 31.6 and § 32.5, and to train the employee to use the same.

§ 33.7 Action by Ministry of Labour

- a) Whenever a labour inspector forwards to the Ministry a record of a claim for compensation for temporary disability which has been settled to the mutual agreement of the employer and of the employee and which has been approved by the inspector, the Ministry shall review and approve the settlement unless it discovers some serious mistake of law, or believes that a serious mistake of fact has been made. In such case it shall order the return of the case to the labour inspector for further consideration and action in accordance with its directions or it shall issue general instructions to the labour inspectors as to the handling of future cases of the same sort if it feels that reopening the case in question would cause undue hardship.
- b) When a labour inspector forwards to the Ministry a record of a claim for compensation for temporary disability on which no agreement has been reached among the employer, the employee, and the inspector, the Ministry shall review the record, the labour inspector's recommendations and the written statements or representations of the parties, but it shall not permit oral testimony except upon extraordinary circumstances, as it may in its discretion determine, making sure that all parties have equal opportunities to be heard in such case. The Ministry may approve the labour inspector's recommendations without opinion, but shall state its reasons for any different decision. It shall be empowered to make interim or temporary order which it feels just in order to prevent undue hardship.
- c) If a claim for compensation for temporary disability is forwarded to the Ministry without any report or recommendation of an inspector in accordance with the provisions of section § 33.3 d), the Ministry shall issue its decision as soon as possible, based on the written record and the statements of the parties only. It shall be empowered to make any interim or temporary order which it feels just in order to prevent undue hardship.
- d) In the case of a claim for compensation for permanent disability as submitted in accordance with the provisions of section § 33.4 a), the Ministry shall ordinarily issue its decision on the basis of the written record only, but it shall permit oral testimony to be given or arguments to be made upon the request of the employer or of the employee, extending equal opportunities therefore to both, including the right to examine and cross-examine witnesses. It may in an appropriate case examine the site of the accident or depute one of its members to hear oral testimony at a place other than the site of the Ministry, or it may depute an inspector to take statements or to hear further testimony on behalf of the Ministry. The Ministry shall state the reasons for every final decision in a case decided under this paragraph, but it may issue such interim or temporary order as it feels just in order to prevent undue hardship.

e) In every other case involving a claim for compensation for permanent disability, the Ministry shall ordinarily issue its decision on the basis of the written record only, but it shall permit oral testimony to be given or arguments made in the same manner and under the same circumstances as in paragraph d) above; and it shall have all, and any powers granted to it in that paragraph. The Ministry shall state in writing the reasons for its decision; but if it approves the recommendations of the labour inspector, it may adopt his or her reasons as its own.

f) In a case involving death, the Ministry shall have the same duties and the same powers as in the case of permanent disability under paragraph d) above. In addition, the Ministry shall determine who are the deceased employee's dependents, if any, and the degree of their dependency, and shall allocate the benefits among them.

g) If the employee for whose disability or death as a consequence of occupational disease compensation is sought worked for more than one employer at the same kind of employment which is alleged to have caused his disease within the period set forth in section § 32.1 c), and if the Ministry finds that the death or disability was in fact caused by such disease, it shall determine the proportionate share of the total compensation awarded to be borne by each such employer; provided, however, that the liability for such compensation shall be joint and several, and that the employee or his or her dependents may bring an action for debt for the entire amount due against any or all of such employers; each one of whom shall have recourse against every other for any payment made by him beyond his or her proportionate share as determined by the Ministry.

h) In proceedings before the Ministry held in accordance with the provisions of this section it shall be presumed in the absence of substantial evidence to the contrary:

i) that the claim for compensation comes within the provisions of this Chapter;

ii) that sufficient notice thereof was given;

iii) that the injury did not result solely from the intoxication of the injured or deceased employee while on duty;

iv) that the injury did not result from the inexcusable misconduct of the injured or deceased employee;

v) that the injury was not occasioned with the intention of the injured or deceased employee to bring about the injury, or death of him or herself or another; and

vi) that the contents of medical and surgical reports introduced in evidence by claimants for compensation shall constitute prima facie evidence of facts as to the matter contained therein.

§ 33.8 Enforcement; appeal

The enforcement of a decision or award of the Ministry in any proceeding arising under this Chapter and appeal from any such decision or award shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter 10.

§ 33.9 Compensation; how payable

a) Compensation shall be paid in the manner provided in this section; provided, however, that the provisions of paragraphs b) to f) shall be subject to the provisions of paragraph g), which shall supersede all provisions of the specified paragraphs to the extent inconsistent therewith whenever paragraph g) is properly invoked by an employer.

b) Except when the Ministry shall otherwise order, for good reason stated in the record, compensation for temporary disability caused by an occupational injury or disease shall be paid on the regular payday.

c) Compensation for permanent partial disability may be paid in a lump sum unless the Ministry, upon advice of the labour inspector or of a party or upon its own motion, determines that the employee, by reason of his or her minority or otherwise, is unable to make satisfactory use of a lump sum payment.

d) Compensation for permanent total disability or for death may be paid in a lump sum, unless the Ministry, upon advice of the labour inspector or of a party or upon its own motion, determines that the employee, by reason of his or her minority or otherwise, is unable to make satisfactory use of a lump sum payment or that the dependents of the disabled or deceased employee who are rightfully entitled to receive such payments on his, her or their own behalf are, for any such reasons, unable to make satisfactory use of lump sum payment. The Ministry shall, however, recommend payment of such compensation award in the form of a pension or of periodic-payments over a specified period of time unless it determines:

- i) that the amount of the pension or periodic payments would be too small to serve any useful purpose; or
- ii) that the disabled employee or his or her dependents or the dependents of the deceased employee will make wise and profitable use of the award if paid to him, her or them in a lump sum; provided, however, that the Ministry may recommend payment partly in the form of a pension or periodic payments and partly as a lump sum or in any other manner which may seem appropriate in the light of all the circumstances.

e) When a totally disabled employee is a minor or when the dependents of such an employee or of a deceased employee who are rightfully entitled to receive compensation on his, her or their own behalf are minors, the Ministry may direct that compensation be paid to his, her or their legal guardians or to a guardian specially appointed for the purpose of administering the compensation award in the best interests of such employee or of his or her dependents.

f) Every employer shall keep an accurate record of all payment made by him or her under each award entered against him by the Ministry and he or she shall render semi-annual reports thereon to the Ministry. Advance payments made by the employer while an issue as to compensation is still being determined shall be credited against the total amount required to be paid by him or her; provided, however, that an employer shall be entitled to recover overpayments made by him or her and received by an employee or by his or her dependents in good faith only by means of an action of quasi-contract.

g) Whenever an employer is unable to ascertain with assurance which persons are entitled to receive compensation due under an award, or does not know the whereabouts of the persons rightfully entitled to receive such compensation, or cannot easily pay over such compensation to the rightful payee due to his or her absence from the vicinity, or for any other good and sufficient reason, the employer may deposit the entire amount due under such award, together with a special administrative fee equivalent to one percent of the amount of the award (but in no case less than five dollars) in the probate court of the county in which the employer's main or registered office is located or in which the disabled or deceased employee was employed (or the county nearest thereto if the office or place of employment is not located in any county). With such deposit the employer shall file an application to the court, reciting the award of the Ministry and the circumstances which make it impossible for the employer to pay over such compensation to the rightful payee; and a copy thereof shall be filed on the Ministry, which shall have the right to intervene in an appropriate case. The probate court shall, in the absence of a finding of bad faith on the part of the employer-applicant, grant such application and administer such fund in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph. The court shall, in connection therewith, be authorized, upon adequate notice and hearing:

- i) to appoint, remove, replace, or discipline a special guardian for an injured minor or disabled employee or for the minor or incompetent dependents of a disabled or deceased employee;
- ii) to require regular accounting and any special accounting which it shall deem necessary from any general or special guardian receiving funds under the provisions of this paragraph or of paragraphs c) or d);
- iii) to determine who are the dependents of an employee rightfully entitled to receive compensation under the provisions of this Chapter; and
- iv) to determine, with due regard to the Ministry's recommendations, how and in what form and what amounts the fund deposited in court shall be paid to the employee or to his or her dependents. The probate court shall render to the employer a semi-annual accounting for each fund deposited by him or her in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph, and a copy thereof shall be filed with the Ministry.

§ 33.10 Review of awards; modification

- a) Every award of compensation for disability which continues longer than three months shall be reviewed at the end of said three months to determine whether the nature or extent of the disability has changed or was incorrectly determined in the first instance, and if any substantial change or error is discovered, a new award may be made by the Ministry on the basis of the conditions as newly determined or evaluated; provided, however, that an award for compensation for a temporary disability may make provision by formula for decreasing payments at the end of certain periods of time or upon the happening of certain specified events without resubmission of the question of the Ministry.
- b) At any other time that the employer or employee feels that a substantial change in the condition of the disabled employee has taken place or that a reevaluation of the nature or of the extent of the disability is required, he or she may request an inspector in the vicinity or the labour inspector who arrives on a regular inspection visit to reopen the question, examine and evaluate new evidence, and approve a new agreement or submit the opposing requests of the two parties for a changed award to the Ministry along with his or her own recommendations. Except in the case of a temporary disability which is gradually lessening, a request to modify an award because of the changed nature or extent of the disability or its original incorrect determination may be made to the Ministry if there is no labour inspector in the vicinity or due there within a reasonable period.
- c) If an employee dies while disabled by an occupational injury or disease and it is alleged, that his or her death was caused by said injury or disease, the claim for additional compensation, if any, shall be treated as a request to the Ministry to reopen and modify the award.

d) In acting upon any request to change an award, the Ministry shall have all the powers vested in it to make original awards by the provisions of this Chapter. In the case of changed awards agreed in by the employer and the employee and approved by the labour inspector, the Ministry shall simply approve the modification without opinion unless it finds a substantial error of law or of fact.

e) The employer is entitled to require a disabled employee to submit to continuing medical examinations at reasonable intervals, to ascertain the progress of his or her recovery and the efficacy of any prescribed treatment provided, however, that the Ministry is empowered to issue rules, in accordance with the provisions of section 34.2(a) of the Executive Law to prevent harassment of a disabled employee by his or her employer in the guise of exercising their rights under this subsection.

f) The Ministry may, upon notice and hearing to all interested persons, modify or set aside any award not completely executed upon a showing of substantial inequity or for any other sufficient reason fully set forth in the record.

§ 33.11 Rights against third party

a) If an employee suffers a disability arising out of and in the course of his or her employment as the consequence of the act of a third-party not in the employ of his or her employer, he or she is nevertheless entitled to the compensation provided by this section for occupational injury (or disease); and his or her employer may bring an action against such third-party for all damages suffered by him or her (including all compensation paid by him or her to the employee, the cost of all medical treatment, and any other payments required by the provisions of this Chapter) as the consequence of the injury to the employee. Such action shall be brought within one year after the Ministry awards such compensation; but another action may be brought for an additional award under section § 33.10; provided, however, it is brought within one year after such additional award is made.

b) An employee who suffers disability arising out of and in the course of his or her employment as a consequence of the act of a third-party, not in the employ of his or her employer may sue the tortfeasor directly for his or her damage in accordance with the provisions of the Private Wrongs Law.

c) If an employee sues the tortfeasor after claiming and obtaining compensation for his or her disability, he or she shall be compelled to join his or her employer as a party plaintiff; and the employer shall be entitled to recover the amount which he or she has paid or for which he or she is liable as compensation under this Chapter, and the employee to recover the balance of the judgment, if any. If the employee claims compensation from his or her employer after obtaining a judgment against the tortfeasor, he or she shall receive such amount only as represents the difference between the total amount of compensation to which he or she would otherwise be entitled, and the amount of judgment he or she received; provided, however, that if the amount of the judgment exceeds the total amount of compensation he or she would otherwise be entitled to, he or she shall receive no compensation, under the provisions of this Chapter.

§ 33.12 Effect of revenue from other sources

The fact that an employee is entitled to sickness, disability, or death benefits under a contract of employment, a contract of insurance or from any other source (except as the result of a judgment against a third-party tortfeasor as provided in section § 33.11) shall not affect his or her right to compensation under this Chapter, nor the amount of compensation to which the employee is entitled.

§ 33.13 Rights not to be waived or assigned

- a) Any agreement by an employee to waive his or her rights under this Chapter shall be void.
- b) Any attempt by an employee to assign his or her rights under this Chapter shall be void, and any agreement to assign compensation payment due under this Chapter shall likewise be void. Compensation payments made pursuant to the requirements of this Chapter shall not be subject to garnishment or attachment, except to execute a judgment against an employee for fraudulently obtaining such compensation.

§ 33.14 Enforcement of payment in default

- a) Compensation due under the provisions of this Chapter shall be a lien against the assets of the employer (and of the employer's insurance carriers, if any) without limit as to amount, subordinate, however, to claims for unpaid wages and to prior recorded liens.
- b) If an employer fails to make any payment required under the provisions of this Chapter on an award of the Ministry of Labour (affirmed by the Labour or Circuit Court, if an appeal was taken therefrom), the employee is entitled to bring an action of debt for the amount due and to obtain summary judgment thereon. The employer shall not be permitted to attack the award collaterally in such an action of debt.

§ 33.15 Records

a) Every employer shall keep records prescribed by this Chapter in the manner prescribed. An employer shall also keep records of every injury reported to them which requires first aid treatment and absence from work for more than a day. All such records shall be available during business hours to labour inspectors and other officials of the Ministry; and any employee or the representative of a deceased employee shall be given a reasonable opportunity to consult the employer's records as to his or her own or his or her decedent's injuries or illness; or the employer may provide his or her employee (or his or her representative) with a copy thereof. For any offence against this paragraph for which no other penalty is prescribed, a violator shall be penalized as set forth in section 3.4 of the Penal Law.

b) The Ministry shall keep permanent records on all compensation laws, which it is called upon to approve or decide. It shall keep a special file of awards and decisions with opinions, which shall be suitably indexed and shall be available for public inspection during business hours.

c) Except as hereinabove provided, all records prescribed by this Chapter shall be confidential. Any government official or employee who discloses any information obtained from any such record except as a witness in court or when otherwise required by law shall be dismissed from office and subject to the penalties for malfeasance.

§ 33.16 Alternative remedies

The liability of an employer under this Chapter shall be exclusive and in lieu of any other liability whatsoever on his or her part, under the laws of Liberia or of any other country, to his or her disabled or deceased employee and to the employee's personal or other legal representatives, his or her spouse, children, parents, dependents; or next of kin, or to anyone otherwise entitled to recover damages, at common law or otherwise, on account of such disability or death.

§ 33.17 Ministry to prescribe forms and procedures

The Ministry shall have the power to prescribe forms and procedures to be followed in connection with all compensation matters under this Chapter. This power shall be in addition to all other powers granted to the Ministry by the provisions of this Act.

§ 33.18 Separability

If any provision of this Chapter, or the application of any such provision to any circumstances or persons, shall be held invalid, the validity of the remainder of the Chapter and the applicability of such provisions to other circumstances or persons shall not be affected thereby.
