

The Lion and The Mouse - Moral Stories in English (PDF)

Once upon a time in a massive, inexperienced jungle, there lived a strong lion. The lion changed into the king of the jungle and each person became a little fearful of him.

One day, at the same time as the lion become taking a snooze below a tall tree, a tiny mouse got here scurrying via. The little mouse didn't see the lion and by accident ran throughout his paw. The lion woke up with a start, and his huge paw caught the tiny mouse.

The lion checked out the scared mouse and roared, "You woke me up! Now you will see what takes place!"

But the mouse, rather than trembling in fear, said, "Oh powerful lion, please permit me pass! I did not suggest to disturb your sleep. Maybe one day I will let you too."

The lion chuckled on the concept that a tiny mouse may want to help him. But he decided to let the mouse cross.

Days handed, and someday the lion determined himself trapped in a hunter's internet. No depend how hard he tried, he could not get away. The jungle echoed with his powerful roars for assist.

Hearing the lion's cries, the little mouse hurried over. With its sharp teeth, the mouse nibbled and nibbled at the net till it broke. The lion was loose!

The lion checked out the mouse with gratitude and said, "Thank you, little friend. I in no way thought someone so small ought to shop someone so large."

From that day on, the lion and the mouse became the nice of pals. They discovered that size doesn't depend in terms of kindness, or even the smallest creatures can make the most important distinction.

And the ethical of the tale is: Kindness is in no way wasted, regardless of how small it is able to appear.
