

FY 2024 ANNUAL REPORT

“MSAC is an ideal partner. They have been encouraging and informative. Working with them has refreshed my understanding of what working with a state council can be like.”

— Harold McGregor, writer & musician (Prince George’s)

MESSAGE from the SECRETARY

Fellow Marylanders:

Our state's creative economy remained strong in FY 2024, and the work of the Maryland State Arts Council (MSAC) is an important reason why. As the largest arts funder in the state, as well as being fourth in the nation in per capita public spending on the arts, MSAC plays an essential role in fulfilling this administration's promise to build a growing and thriving economy for every Marylander.

With a FY 2024 budget of $35.5 million, MSAC's service to the state over the past year has been exceptional. Its funding has supported arts activities in every jurisdiction, from mountain to shore, and its talented staff have been at the forefront in making sure resources are accessible in every city and town.

This annual report tells the story of an arts sector that is vibrant, ambitious, and equitable, thanks to the efforts of MSAC. I hope you'll take some time to learn about how their work contributes to our quality of life and makes Maryland an attractive place to do business in the arts, whether you're a groundbreaking artist-entrepreneur or an arts organization bringing inspiration to audiences of thousands.

Kevin Anderson
Secretary

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The past year at MSAC has been memorable in every sense.

Our team administered a record amount of regular funding through 16 grant programs, including the new Arts Capital program supporting infrastructure projects for arts organizations; wrapped up Arts Relief efforts by managing the last of a one-time allocation of state funds ensuring the health of Maryland's arts sector after the pandemic; and fielded a steadily-increasing public demand for MSAC services, thanks in part to attention attracted by last year's extra resources.

We sadly said goodbye to our former Chair, Jackie Copeland, who passed away unexpectedly at the beginning of the year, and we offered our gratitude to Chris Sloan, who stepped up to serve as Interim Chair in Jackie's absence.

Through it all, we expressed appreciation for the commitment and reliability of our staff in helping the agency fulfill its mission. Their efforts truly make it possible for MSAC to bring the transformative power of the arts to the entire state, and we thank them for their service.

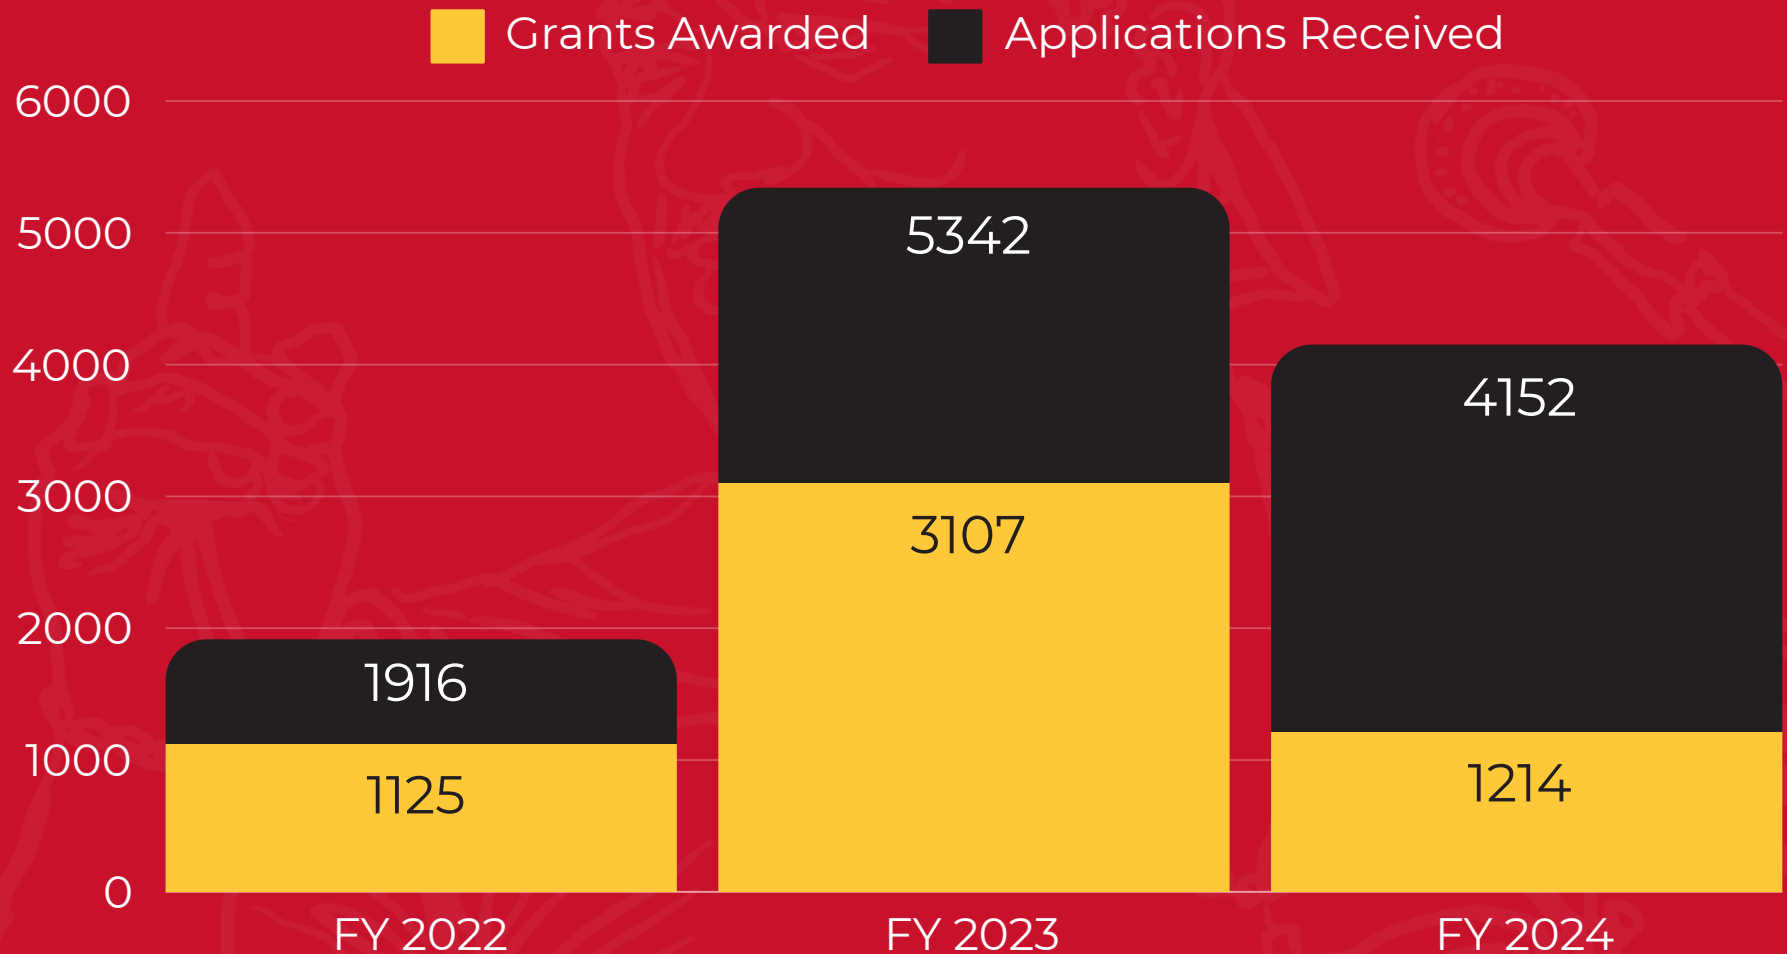

Ruby Harper Lopez, Chair

Steven Skerritt-Davis, Executive Director

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The charts below illustrate MSAC grants awarded versus applications received between FY 2022 and FY 2024.

GRANTS for ORGANIZATIONS

The Grants for Organizations program, MSAC's largest in terms of funds awarded, provided operating support through an equitable funding formula to 291 organizations producing or presenting arts programming for public audiences across Maryland.

CREATIVITY

The Creativity grant supported two kinds of arts activities: general operations for smaller organizations and projects for organizations and artists. The popular program funded activities across the state, with applications received from every jurisdiction.

“Funding has allowed us to expand coverage across the Eastern Shore of Maryland, providing meaningful, hands-on art activities to financially disadvantaged and minority residents of remote, rural communities. Our ongoing arts education programming continues to succeed at bringing together a diverse cross-section of the local population from Talbot, Dorchester, Caroline, Queen Anne’s and Kent counties.”

COUNTY ARTS DEVELOPMENT

The County Arts Development program bolstered Maryland's network of county arts agencies with operating funding for the designated government offices and nonprofit organizations supporting local arts activities in each jurisdiction of the state—twenty-three counties plus Baltimore City. All county arts agencies provide local arts funding opportunities, programming, and other resources.

ARTS CAPITAL

The Arts Capital program was new to MSAC last year, after the passage of legislation allocating $3 million in arts capital funding annually through FY 2029. In its inaugural year, the program supported several projects that improved the infrastructure at organizations offering arts-based cultural education or experiences to the public.

"Receiving this grant at the age of 70 has been a dream come true for me. It is a testament to the belief that creativity knows no age limits, and your dedication to fostering a vibrant arts community in our state has made this possible. Your commitment to funding programs that support artists like myself, who educate audiences on the culture of the Caribbean through dance, storytelling, and sound, is truly commendable."

Conservation grants

The Public Art Across Maryland program funded the planning, creation, installation, and conservation of publicly accessible art integrated into the everyday experiences of Marylanders statewide.

In addition, the program supported progress on eleven commissioned works, including the installation of four new works, at state-owned facilities. This number of active projects represents an increase in capacity made possible by MSAC's Public Artist Roster, a directory easing artists' access to work opportunities and removing barriers to the artist selection process.

The Arts in Education (AiE) program promoted the work of teaching artists in school and community settings by funding members of the Teaching Artist Roster, a vetted list of Maryland artists and organizations whose efforts strengthen lifelong learning.

The AiE program also administered Poetry Out Loud, a state recitation competition helping students master public speaking skills and build self-confidence. State champion Madison Harris received the top accolade for the second year in a row. She went on to compete in the national Poetry Out Loud competition.

ARTS in EDUCATION

MARYLAND TRADITIONS

Maryland Traditions, MSAC's traditional arts program, provided support for one-on-one traditional arts education experiences, long-term achievement in the traditional arts, and a network of eight regional folklife centers raising the profile of the many cultural communities that call Maryland home.

DISTRICTS

Maryland's twenty-nine Arts & Entertainment Districts received support from MSAC in promoting community involvement, tourism, and revitalization through the availability of tax-related incentives. This support included funding to most districts through the Arts & Entertainment District General Operating Support grant.

PRESENTING & TOURING

The Presenting and Touring program sparked collaborations between Maryland's performing artists and performance venues through the Maryland Performing Artist Touring Roster, a listing that encourages connections between the two groups. The program also provided funding to presenting organizations that engage roster artists through the Maryland Touring grant.

EXHIBITIONS

MARYLAND MUSE: A TAPESTRY of INSPIRATION

Works by dozens of Maryland artists were celebrated this year in the exhibition “Maryland Muse: A Tapestry of Inspiration,” hosted in collaboration with Maryland Comptroller Brooke Lierman’s “Art in Treasured Spaces” initiative at the state treasury building in Annapolis.

The collected works were inspired by the state’s unique culture and beauty, as well as the daily lives of the Marylanders who created them. Of the 63 pieces featured, 53 were submitted by individual artists, and 10 represented grantees of the Maryland Traditions program, which supports the state’s living cultural traditions.
