The bags have a standard height of 250mm and can be expanded to a height of 450mm. To secure the bag there is high quality 50mm webbing straps with quick release buckles located in the appropriate places.

To ensure maximum longevity of the bag it is recommended to place rubber matting or something similar to create a flat surface between the roof rack and the roof rack bag.

We can also manufacture custom sized bags to suit specific requirements. All Southern Cross Roof Rack Bags are manufactured using 12oz Wax Converters Canvas which is an Australian made canvas, designed to withstand the harsh Australian environment.

They are all manufactured by Southern Cross canvas to the highest standards of quality and workmanship.

Setting up and Packing up

1. Leaving the four main corner pegs of the tent in. Close all windows and the fly-wire door. But leave the canvas door half open. This allows the air to exit the tent. Pull the roof frame backwards, so that the two corner seams pull taught.

2. Roll the frame on to itself to the left. By doing this, it then pulls the next two seams taught, whilst naturally folding the canvas.

3. Again repeat the process of rolling the frame on to itself to the left. By doing this, it then pulls the next two seams taught.

4. Once more repeat the process of rolling the frame on to itself to the left. By doing this, it then pulls the next two seams taught.

Setting up and Packing up

5. At this point pull the roof frame taught again. You should be back to where you started. With the canvas all nicely folded.

6. Place the roof frame flat on the ground. The trick is to place the frame the same width of the frame away from the external edge of the tent.

7. Now fold the whole length of the floor over the top of the roof frame, so that the edge of the canvas is now on the far edge of the roof frame. Basically you should have a fold that is the same width of the roof frame running length ways down the whole floor of the tent.

8. Now fold the other side of the tent that still has canvas exposed length ways, so that the outside edge of the tents now touches the other edge of the floor. Basically to the edge of the roof frame. You should now only have the underside of the tent (vinyl) showing. Folding the tent in this manner ensures that none of the flooring comes in contact with the canvas.

Setting up and Packing up

9/10. Fold the section that you have just folded over the top of the roof frame. You should now be left with a neatly folded length of tent that is the same width as the roof frame.

11. Once this has been done, you can now grab the edge of the tent and bring it backwards towards the other edge of the tent length ways, until you have reached the edge of the roof frame.

12. Now grab the roof frame where you have just created the last fold. Fold that backwards again using the roof frame this time. By doing this it ensure that the tent is been packed as taught as possible to the roof frame.

13. Follow the previous step again. You should now find that you have a perfectly packed tent that will pack away into its carry bag every time. After some practice you will find packing up your Southern Cross Tent can be packed up with ease.

SOME TIPS TO REMEMBER.

- When folding the tent wipe/brush the floor down as you are folding it, to remove any dirt and moisture that may be on the floor.
- If the tent has to be folded away wet, ensure that it is set-up and dried out at the earliest convenience. Try to avoid it been packed up wet for more then 48 hours.
- Inspect the area that you intend to set up. If setting up on rough terrain ensure to clear any objects that may damage the tent, and place a ground sheet down.
- Always check that the appropriate poles and pegs are packed up as-well as the tent and placed in the appropriate place in the vehicle or trailer.
- Last but not least have a memorable and enjoy-full time camping under the Southern Cross with Southern Cross Canvas Products.

Canvas Care

All good quality canvas products need to be weathered or seasoned prior to been used for the application that they have been designed to be used for.

This can be achieved by erecting the product in the backyard and allowing it to be exposed to rain, or by using a garden hose create a shower like effect (be sure not to breach local water restrictions). The product needs to become thoroughly saturated.

The best way to tell that the canvas is saturated enough, is when the water stops beading of the canvas. Once this has been achieved the canvas product then needs to be completely dried out. By doing this it is allowing the canvas and cotton stitching to swell and fill the stitching holes. You will have to repeat this process a minium of three times. Some areas where there is numerous layers of canvas stitched together it may take more then three wetting outs before the seams completely seal.

Always ensure that the canvas is completely dried before you store it away. And store it off the ground in a nice clean and dry environment. A shelf in the garage is a great example. As damp canvas is a perfect place for mildew and mould to form and this can break down the canvas.

If this does occur, allow the canvas to fully dry out. Then brush the affected area with a soft bristle brush. Then gently sponge down the affected area with a solution mix of one-part liquid household bleach (e.g White King – Do not use harsh pool chlorines) and four-parts cold water.

You may not remove all the spores but simply kill the mould/mildew and stop it from spreading. You will have to reproof the affected area with a waterproofing agent.

When away using your canvas products do not allow bird droppings, tree sap etc. come in contact with your canvas goods, as they can damage the canvas. Brush the affected area with a soft bristle brush and rinse with cold water.

Keep your canvas clean by regularly brushing both inside and out with a soft bristle brush and hose it down occasionally with cold clean water. Never apply soaps, detergents etc or a high-pressure water hose to the canvas.

Ensure that substances such as cleaning fluids, petrol, solvents etc are stored well away from the canvas goods, as they can be harmful to its life and usefulness.

Upon each trip once arriving home give the product a general check over for any damage or stains etc and ensure that it is completely dry before storing away. If the product is going to be stored away for prolonged periods of time it is recommended that at least once a year to get the product out. Have a general look over, check for damage and then wet out the canvas. This ensures the product remains clean and waterproof.

If these simple instructions are followed and the product is well looked after your Southern Cross Canvas Product should last a lifetime.
