Did You Know?

Four out of five students stop attending church after they graduate while, 87% of homeschooled young adults continue their faith in adulthood. This isn't just about education but also about discipleship. It's crucial for the local church to support families who wish to impart a Godly education to their children. After all, whoever teaches the children is also discipling them.

What is a “Schoolhouse”?

A Schoolhouse is a homeschool co-op that operates like a microschool or homeschool pod. It meets twice a week and is led by parents. The curriculum used for PK–12th grade is based on a Biblical worldview and can be found on SchoolhouseTeachers.com. The Schoolhouse is a local church ministry and is supervised by a pastor/elder board. Its goal is to partner with families in training up children in the way they should go.

Why Should My Church Have One?

- Your church will attract homeschoolers as parents learn of the Schoolhouse.
- Current member families will feel welcome to “do school” in their home church.
- Your church will become a local solution for families exiting public schools.
- Pastors and elders can minister to incoming families.
- Church leaders can participate in classes and homeschool activities during Schoolhouse days.
- Opportunities to promote church events.

A Schoolhouse Promotes:

Multi-generational blessings: Parents can connect and network with one another. Children can learn from and interact with older members of the church. The older generation can impart wisdom and make a positive impact on the younger generation.

Outreach on both sides: The church opens its doors to the community. Those families have the chance to see needs in the church that they can use as service opportunities for their students.

Good stewardship: God blesses us so we can bless others. The resources that a church may have such as projectors, gym equipment, and a piano could greatly enrich the education of students in the local community.

Every church should have a Schoolhouse; will yours?
