HERE'S THE GIST OF THE ACT:

ACT[®]

- The ACT (American College Testing) is a standardized test in the United States that high school students take to seek admission for undergraduate programs in university.
- It assesses a student's knowledge and skills in areas such as English, math, reading, and science reasoning.
- The ACT tells colleges how ready you are for further academic pursuits.

The syllabus for the ACT Math, Reading, English and Science and the Writing section is tabulated below:

ACT Math	ACT English	ACT Reading	ACT Science
Intermediate Algebra	Usage of language	There will be a total of four passages. Each passage will be given from various sections like fiction, humanities, social studies and science.	Conflicting viewpoints
Coordinate Geometry	Grammar		Data representations
Trigonometry	Usage		Graphs and tables
Plane Geometry	Punctuation		Research methodology and summary
Pre- Algebra	Sentence structure
Algebra Elementary	Rhetorical Language Skill
	Organization
	Style
	Strategy

Lastly, you also have an optional Writing section. You can write an essay on one topic.

SAT VS. ACT

ACT[®]

The SAT and ACT are two standardized tests used by colleges and universities in the United States for admissions decisions. While both tests assess a student's knowledge and skills, they have some key differences that set them apart.

Colleges that historically favored the SAT include Ivy League universities such as Harvard University, Yale University, and Princeton University, as well as other selective institutions like Stanford University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT). However, some of these schools have transitioned to test-optional policies in recent years, diminishing the emphasis on standardized test scores.

On the other hand, colleges that historically favored the ACT include public universities in the Midwest and South, such as University of Michigan, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, University of Alabama, and University of Texas at Austin. These schools have traditionally seen a higher proportion of applicants submitting ACT scores.
