They first saw the cottage when blackberrying with their family and imagined how they would renovate it were they to have the chance; sadly it was outside their reach bearing in mind the amount of money needed to undertake the renovation. So they watched it being renovated by the new owners who, having finished it, rented it out and moved to South Africa. Tracking down the owners, they bought it and set about replacing some of the period features which had been lost in renovation and stamping their mark on it.
