

NEWS

FreeOfficeFinder launches 'first interactive price comparison tool' for coworking space

By Mitchell Labiak | Thu 16 January 2020

Online office broker FreeOfficeFinder has launched what it says is “the first interactive price comparison tool for private and coworking serviced office space”.

The data from FreeOfficeFinder's tool reveals that central London desk rates are nearly three times greater than the UK average

The tool, which is updated quarterly, shows users the average rent for private and coworking space in specific areas and compares it to others. Users can filter preferred areas and specify desk numbers to get an approximate price on their required office space.

The data from the tool reveals that the average central London desk rate of £682 a month is nearly three times greater than the UK average of £282 a month.

“One of the biggest challenges faced in an office search is understanding the market price for an office,” said Nick Riesel, managing director of FreeOfficeFinder. “This new tool eliminates that problem, allowing a user to understand the average price for different sized offices in their chosen locations within seconds.”

“Initial feedback for the tool has been incredible. Serviced offices are moving from a niche product to a mainstream solution so it’s proving a much-needed resource in a growing market.”

FreeOfficeFinder spent a year creating the tool using pricing data from over 2,000 serviced offices that they monitor to support the findings.

Flexible workspaces News Offices Proptech

Terms & Conditions
Contact us

Cookie Policy
About Us

Privacy Policy
FAQ

Subscribe
RSS feeds

Join the Property Week community through our social media channels

