Fact Sheet on the FTC's Noncompete Rulemaking

On April 23, 2024, the FTC voted to finalize a new rule to prohibit employers from enforcing noncompetes against workers.

- The Commission determined that noncompetes are an unfair method of competition and therefore violate Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act ("FTC Act").
- The final rule prohibits employers from entering into new noncompetes with workers on or after the effective date. The rule also prohibits employers from enforcing existing noncompetes with workers other than senior executives.
- The rule is set to go into effect on September 4, 2024.

Noncompetes restrict the freedom of American workers and suppress wages.

- Noncompetes restrict workers' fundamental freedom to leave for a better job or to start their own business.
- In many cases, noncompetes are take-it-or-leave-it contracts that exploit workers' lack of bargaining power and coerce workers into staying in jobs they would rather leave, or force workers to leave a profession or even relocate.
- By restricting workers from moving freely, noncompetes prevent workers from accepting higher-paying jobs.
- Noncompetes even reduce the wages of workers who aren't subject to noncompetes.

Noncompetes stifle new businesses and new ideas.

- Noncompetes prevent workers from starting their own firms and block new businesses from hiring qualified workers.
- Noncompetes restrict the flow of knowledge between firms, and studies have found that noncompetes reduce innovation. This affects not just workers but also consumers by depriving consumers of better products and lower prices that result from competition and innovation.

Noncompetes are widespread throughout the U.S. economy.

- Roughly one in five Americans, totaling nearly 30 million people, are subject to noncompetes.
- The Commission received over 26,000 comments, with thousands of workers describing how noncompetes blocked them from taking a better job, negotiating better pay, or starting their own business.
- The Commission also heard from entrepreneurs and small businesses who said noncompetes prevented them from starting new ventures or hiring knowledgeable workers to help grow their businesses.

By banning noncompetes, the FTC estimates that:

- Over 25,000 commenters supported a categorical ban on noncompetes.
- New business formation will grow by 2.7%, creating over 8,500 new businesses each year.
- American workers' earnings will increase by $400-$488 billion over the next decade, with workers' earnings rising an estimated $524 a year on average.
- Health care costs will be reduced by $74-$194 billion over the next decade in reduced spending on physician services.
- Innovation will increase, with an average estimated increase of 17,000-29,000 more patents each year over the next decade.

The Noncompete Rule

- The rule states that noncompetes are an unfair method of competition.

- The rule prohibits employers from enforcing noncompetes with workers other than senior executives as of the effective date, set to be on September 4, 2024.
 - Less than 1% of workers are estimated to be senior executives under the final rule.
 - Specifically, the final rule defines the term "senior executive" as workers earning more than $151,164 who are in a "policy-making position."

- The rule requires employers to notify workers whose noncompetes are no longer enforceable that their noncompetes are no longer in effect and will not be enforced.
 - The FTC provides model language that employers can use to notify employees.
- The rule includes an exception that allows noncompetes between the seller and buyer of a business.
- The final rule differs from the proposed rule in several respects.
 - The rule does not ban existing noncompetes with senior executives.
 - The rule simplifies the notice and compliance requirements for employers.
