

OPENING CEREMONY

UNCSW

The formal discussion was suspended, and the committee then engaged in a two-on-two discussion. The Delegates of Germany and the Netherlands spoke first on the pro-side, followed by the Delegates of Thailand and China on the con-side. Member nations made their opening remarks before the discussion on the agenda's legalisation of prostitution began. Transwomen are not women, the delegate of France said, to which the delegate from Germany disputed and stressed and replied to how there's no difference between the two. The Delegate of France then brought up the unethical nature of prostitution and sexual activity, to which the entire committee objected. A few other delegates also proved the country wrong.

The delegate of Thailand questioned whether you would sell yourself to your own father if he paid for everything you needed to survive, including food and shelter. The delegate of United Kingdom also inquired as to whether the daughter engages in sexual activity with her father and argued that, even if she does, there would be no reason for her to become a prostitute for her dad. The delegate Australia added that having sex is only permitted after marriage. The German delegate objected, arguing that having sex is something you may do both before and after marriage and that there is no requirement that you do so.

ICJ

The first session began with a roll call of all the delegates, all of whom appeared eager to win. Iran's representative raised the first motion and began the opening remarks, with the representative of the Russian Federation serving as a witness. Regarding Russia's progress, the US imposed sanctions. Iran has maintained diplomatic ties with Australia as well as a close partnership with China. The delegation went on to state that Iran had further backed Lebanon in the 2006 conflict.

While the US is consistently preoccupied with its own agenda. The Russian federation discussed seizing assets and billions of dollars that were held as part of the US arrangement. Additionally it has violated the treaties directly of the right of freedom and navigation and commerce.

The United States presented its case by stating its immensely impressive foreign policies and alligated Iran of producing enriched uranium followed by Germany and France supporting the US by stating the killings done by the Iranians and the violated human rights.

After many failed mods, the delegates decided to move into a moderated caucus raised by Germany on Nuclear weapons. In which, US stated Iran as a "rogue" country and Japan throwing shade on Iran's deeds to disturb world peace.

After the delegates returned to the committee for the second session, the blocs rejected 4-5 motions in a row before passing an Unmod for 10 minutes. The delegates ultimately supported a mod caucus on humanitarian rights where the Russian Federation delegate underlined the effects of the US sanctions on the Iranians' ability to access basic necessities. The US and its allies stated the wrong doings done by Iran against its own citizens to which Iran had nothing to say in defence. After which Russia, Germany, Morocco and Slovakia got into a heated argument.

Over all it was a great session for the first day and all the delegates tried their best to make the session interactive and productive.

AIPPM

A blissful morning. Every delegate seemed ready for the session to start and to shine up with their research.

AIPPM started with their second agenda to pass on and raise their placards for recognition. The agenda was, 'deliberation upon the past seven years of the NDA government in India'. At first all the portfolios were anxious. But by the time the committee went so fluent that no one, not even the eb(s) were able to stop them with their compelling POI(s) for each other.

First portfolio of Mr. OP Birla, spoke in support of the NDA government and shared such pertinent information. Mr. Akhilesh Yadav was not satisfied with him so he asked him for a POI. Unemployment being the biggest threat in India is on the edge of knife now. This argument between the delegates led to a very momentous conversation.

"There is enough for everyone's needs, but not for everyone's greed". Well said by MK. Gandhi. This statement applies to Ms. Mayawati as she is not satisfied by the troops sent to Jammu and Kashmir by the NDA government. The supporters of the NDA government obviously denied this and fought for themselves with smartness but Mayawati didn't back out and answered many questions. So, we can say that this time the delegates have come up very well prepared and adept. Rahul Gandhi is not very pleased at the fact that the government changed the name only for Muslim cities. Which BJP again rejects and argues with him. This was a heated conversation and the eb(s) looked like they were done with the delegates on the first day.

An open debate which is an aggressive part of AIPPM. It can be fun and serious at the same time. Some of the portfolios like Yogi Adityanath, OP Birla, Rahul Gandhi and many more were on fire no one seemed less. We have always been talking about women empowerment, and in this case there are many people who are still not satisfied with the privileges they are given. MK Stalin raised a point that women are not safe in this country and are abused. Mr. S. Jaishankar gave precise information stating all the rights which are given to women. MK Stalin was stunned and speechless at the same time.

With this, the first day ended for AIPPM.

That means there's a lot more to go on in this committee.

UNHSC

The committee discussed the famous hypothetical Case of the Speluncean Explorers and tried to come to a conclusive outcome for the same. The committee brought forth the arguments and opinions of different countries to express their views on the basis of the constitution of their respective nations and to see where they stand on the issue of cannibalism.

The delegate of Uganda put forward the first motion of establishing the general speaker's list, the country being against the conviction of the explorers. Uganda remained to stay neutral all throughout the committee leaning towards the rational decision of cannibalism. On the contrary, the delegate of USA were affirmative on the conviction of the explorers under the CORPUS LAW.

The delegate of Norway chose to remain neutral. Norway provided another hypothetical situation of the explorers waiting for 10 days more and calling the rescuers only on the onset of the feeling of starvation. The committee then went into an unmoderated caucus. The delegate of Netherland raised the motion; cannibalism being practiced since olden times for a number of reasons especially spiritual ones. USA was against the motion and that taking the life of someone justifiable, let alone, blaming it on ancestral practices. Uganda somewhat agreed with this stance by acknowledging cannibalism as traditional African healing practice and that if the countrymen readily buried this gruesome tradition then Netherlands could do the same. The delegate of India proposed the motion of necessity being a justiciable reason. Open debate commenced between the delegates with the approval of the chair, Uganda against cannibalism, argued with Germany on the absence of laws against cannibalism in their country and how they are not ready for laws but for convictions, with that, the committee session came to an end, The sessions had thought-provoking discussions and arguments that were put forth by the delegates. The chair was wise in their words and made the HSC committee an exciting and fruitful one.

UNSC

Session began at around 12 with all the delegates and the executives keeping their agendas in mind and all looked enthusiastic and prepared. The session started with South Korea raising the motion on COMBATING NUCLEAR PROLIFERATION and the same motion was raised by delegate of INDIA and SPAIN with different timings at first South Korea's motion but as the speaker started given the speech EB felt the timings were inappropriate hence executive again opened the floor for raising the motion then after INDIA's motion getting failed the final SPAIN's motion passed with majority half looked confused and half super confident. Countries started putting their stance on the raised motion, first United Kingdom then North Korea and then Canada and many more. The committee was blessed and overshadowed with the lively and chaotic reactions of Spain. Partnership of Gabon and Spain stole the show by questioning the delegate of Russia, and the session 1 of the committee ended with countries giving their stance and some being happy and confident with their performance. Session 2 started with lobbying session Spain, Gabon, India and France took active part in the session and as time passed the Moderated Caucus raised by Japan and the countries spoke their views for total timings 15 mins and then again a moderated caucus happened motion of delegate of Spain passed with majority and the countries again started giving their views actively and the day 1 ends with 2 sessions with various stances and arguments.

UNGA

It all started with icebreaking session the delegates were Enthusiastic but a bit nervous.

The EB started with the roll call of the delegates.

The first session was of GSL that was raise by the delegate of United Kingdom on the agenda itself.

The country one by one stated their point on the agenda. When the delegate of Italy raised the POI for the delegate of Ukraine everyone bangs the table with full energy! After the session 1 everyone headed for lunch. The delegates came back with more energy and bright smile on their faces.

When the delegate of North Korea started it's speech everyone was burst with the POI's.

It was so much fun!

The delegate of North Korea stated that " As sure as I am a man" everyone was laughing like hell after that an unformal debate between India, Brazil , United Kingdom, Germany and North Korea made everyone bangs the table once again!

This ends the committee here it was a very fruitful session today!

MAP

Every delegate was confident about their research and the Committee commenced with the introduction and experience of delegates and the EBs, the Committee proceeded with the guidance and the best wishes of the EB.

The tranquillity was intruded on by the establishment of the MODs, every delegate's attention was drawn towards the delegate of UK as soon as she concluded with her MOD, she directly went to attack Russia. After some time delegate of Australia didn't leave a chance to confuse other delegates by asking POI's and after that the vommittee carried on with the GSLs.

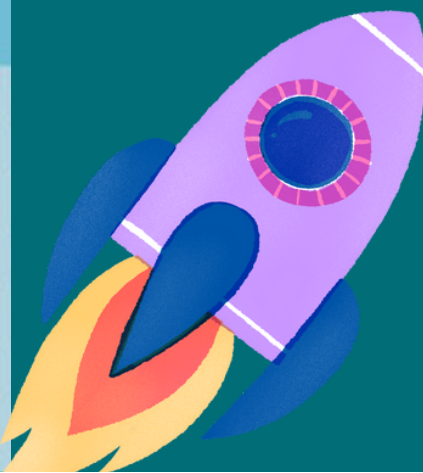

After lunch the session began and the energy raised among the delegates again .

Meanwhile the EBs of IP entered the committee and delegates banged the tables as the greeting.

Eyes of the delegates sparkled when the delegate of Germany raised the MOD to suspend the Committee and enter the motion of entertainment for 15 mins.

Everyone burst with laughter when the delegate of Australia was asked to drink the coke and gargle with it. After that the delegate of France was asked to propose Germany, it was a capturable moment.

And thus the committee ended with laughter

UNHRC

The session began with loud banging on the table. It seemed fun in the beginning but by the passage of time, the debate became too harsh. Although it was interesting.

The committee session began with the general speakers list in which the delegates representing their respective countries expressed their country's stance regarding the agenda "protecting refugees from human trafficking". They dictate how the country is protecting refugees from human trafficking by preventing internal displacement.

As the delegate of Iraq completed the GSL, the delegate of India raised POI and asked that " In Iraq there are many NGOs, supporting women and many rules to stand up women as well, but when it comes to divorce the judiciary council only listens to the man, Why? The delegate of Iraq replied as "the government is looking into it". Then the EB guided to Iraq that you can't just say government is looking inyo it, you have to give a proper answer. And the session ends up

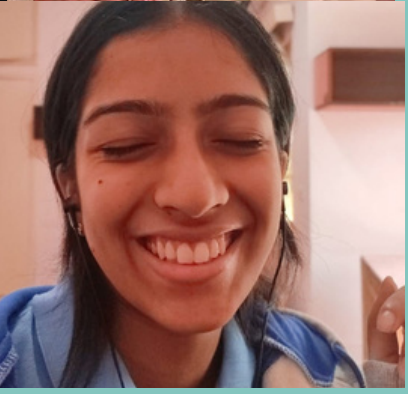

And now starts the second session all the delegates spoke their general speakers list. Now the delegate of bangladesh would like to raise a mode on the agenda "protecting refugees from human trafficking by preventing internal displacement". So many of the delegates are in the favour of the motion and they are France followed by Brazil, Nepal, Chile, India, Afghanistan, USA, Iran and many more...

As it was an unmod the committee started discussion. And now its time for the debate many of them raised poi but they wants to debate via chits and it was going on very silently.

And at last EB guiding every delegate to be very formal and also needs a little more confidence.

And the session again ended with a loud bang....
