VIRGINIA: McAULIFFE HOLDS ISSUE EDGE IN GUV RACE

Biden and Trump factor into vote choice for some

West Long Branch, NJ – Democrat Terry McAuliffe has a lead in his bid to return to the Virginia governor's mansion after a four-year absence according to Monmouth ("Mon-muth") University Poll. His opponent, former equity management executive Glenn Youngkin, has a large advantage in the western part of the state and a small edge among independent voters. The sizable Democratic electorate in Northern Virginia offsets this, though, putting McAuliffe ahead in the statewide results. A number of voters say that both the current and prior occupants of the White House will have an impact on their vote for governor, although most of them have already decided on a candidate. The poll also finds tight margins in other statewide contests.

Just under half (47%) of registered voters currently support McAuliffe while 42% back Youngkin. Both candidates claim formidable leads among voters who identify with their respective parties, but Youngkin holds an edge (44% to 38%) among independents. More Virginia voters describe themselves as Democrats than Republicans, which accounts for McAuliffe's lead.

McAuliffe has a significant advantage among voters of color – 80% to 8% among Black voters and 58% to 28% among Latinos, Asians, and multiracial voters. Youngkin holds a large 56% to 35% lead among white voters, but there is a split based on education. His lead with this group is largely due to white voters without a bachelor's degree (65% to 25%). White college graduates narrowly prefer McAuliffe (49% to 42% for Youngkin).

Looking at regional results, McAuliffe enjoys a large advantage in Northern Virginia (56% to 27%) as well as leads in the eastern Tidewater (50% to 37%) and central Richmond/I-95 (53% to 43%) regions. Youngkin claims a large lead in the western half of the commonwealth (61% to 31% for the Democrat). Comparing these results to the last gubernatorial contest, McAuliffe is doing as well as incumbent Gov. Ralph Northam's 2017 margins in the eastern (56% to 43%) and central (54% to 45%) parts of Virginia, but running slightly behind him in NoVa (67% to 32%) and the west (38% to 61%).

"Vote preferences in Northern Virginia and the western part of the commonwealth basically cancel each other out if turnout patterns match the last four years. Youngkin's challenge is to chip away at McAuliffe's edge in the rest of Virginia," said Patrick Murray, director of the independent Monmouth University Polling Institute.

A range of potential electorate scenarios* show McAuliffe with a lead ranging from 2 points to 7 points depending on the model. Youngkin does better when more low-propensity voters are included in the mix. Specifically, McAuliffe has a fairly comfortable lead among voters who have cast ballots in every general election since 2016 (52% to 41%) while those who voted in only 2 or 3 elections during that time are evenly split (42% for Youngkin and 41% for McAuliffe). When the potential electorate is limited only to voters who cast ballots in the 2017 gubernatorial election, the Democrat holds a 50% to 44% margin. The only group Youngkin makes a real dent with are voters who describe themselves as being more enthusiastic about this year's race versus past elections for governor. The Republican has a 55% to 36% lead among this group, but they make up only 26% of all registered voters.

"Republicans are a little more excited than Democrats this year. The question is whether this enthusiasm turns out enough low-propensity Youngkin supporters to close the gap," said Murray.

Virginia voters have a range of policy concerns on their minds in this race. The most important issues they would like the candidates to talk about include the Covid pandemic (23%), education and public schools (18%), the economy (16%), jobs (14%), health care (13%), gun rights (9%), taxes (8%), and race issues (8%).

When asked whom they trust more to handle these top concerns, voters give McAuliffe an advantage on the pandemic (38% to 26% for Youngkin) and race issues (35% to 26%), and a narrower edge on education and schools (36% to 31%). The electorate is more divided on trusting either Youngkin (35%) or McAuliffe (33%) more when it comes to jobs and the economy.

"McAuliffe has the edge on most of the major issues in this race. Youngkin needs to knock him down on some of these issues, or get voters to focus on other concerns where the Republican has more of a natural advantage," said Murray.

Just under 4 in 10 voters have a favorable impression of each major party nominee – 39% for McAuliffe and 37% for Youngkin. The Democrat, however, earns higher unfavorable numbers (35%) than the Republican does (27%). One-third (35%) have no opinion of Youngkin, who is making his first run for office. It is perhaps more surprising that 1 in 4 (27%) have no opinion of the former governor. In the final year of McAuliffe's term, a Monmouth poll of likely voters in July 2017 gave the then-incumbent a job rating of 52% approve to 37% disapprove, with 11% offering no opinion.

About 3 in 10 voters (29%) say McAuliffe's political views are in line with most Virginians while 21% say he is out of step. Another 50% say they are not sure about how the former governor's views align with the commonwealth. Likewise, 22% say Youngkin's views are in line with the state, 23% say they are out of step, and 55% are not sure.

Just under half of the electorate says President Joe Biden will be either a major (32%) or minor (14%) factor in their vote for governor this year. Slightly fewer say that former President Donald Trump will be a major (29%) or minor (12%) factor. Interestingly, these results are similar to Trump's reported impact four years ago (26% major and 14% minor among likely voters in July 2017). However, among those who say either the current or prior president is a major factor in their vote for governor this year, more than 8 in 10 report they are already firmly decided on their candidate choice. Among those voters who are undecided or say they could change their minds, just 20% say either president will be a major factor in their vote.

"The 2017 governor's race was nationalized with a surge in anti-Trump turnout handing Northam a comfortable win. The presidential dynamic may play a role again, but it's unlikely to move any numbers at this point. If either Trump or Biden is a major factor in your vote, you almost certainly know already who you will be voting for in this race," said Murray.

Looking at other races on the ballot, the Monmouth University Poll finds tight contests for attorney general between Democratic incumbent Mark Herring (45%) and Republican challenger Jason Miyares (43%) and for the open lieutenant governor seat between Democrat Hala Ayala (43%) and Republican Winsome Sears (42%). The Democratic Party has a small aggregate advantage over the GOP in the race for House of Delegates (48% to 45%).

The Monmouth University Poll was conducted by telephone from August 24 to 29, 2021 with 802 Virginia registered voters. The question results in this release have a margin of error of +/- 3.5 percentage points. The poll was conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute in West Long Branch, NJ.

* Monmouth's electorate models for the 2021 election are not forecasts. They are designed to present a range of reasonable outcomes based on voter intentions at this moment. Monmouth tests a variety of models where each registered voter is assigned a probabilistic weight between 0 and 1, based primarily on past voting history, with adjustments for self-reported likelihood to vote, motivation and other factors. Further adjustments are applied to the aggregate sample based on turnout propensities among different demographic groups (e.g. by race, gender, education). The two scenarios included in this report show the extreme ends of the range of possible outcomes from the model testing.

METHODOLOGY

The Monmouth University Poll was sponsored and conducted by the Monmouth University Polling Institute from August 24 to 29, 2021 with a statewide random sample of 802 Virginia voters drawn from a list of registered voters. This includes 227 contacted by a live interviewer on a landline telephone and 575 contacted by a live interviewer on a cell phone, in English. Monmouth is responsible for all aspects of the survey design, data weighting and analysis. The full sample is weighted for party primary voting history, age, gender, race, education, and region based on state voter registration list information and U.S. Census information (CPS 2018 supplement). Data collection support provided by Braun Research (field) and Aristotle (voter sample). For results based on the full voter sample, one can say with 95% confidence that the error attributable to sampling has a maximum margin of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points (unadjusted for sample design). Sampling error can be larger for sub-groups (see table below). In addition to sampling error, one should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

VA Regions:

NoVa – Loudon, Fairfax, Arlington, and Prince William counties and included cities.

Tidewater – counties and cities along the Chesapeake Bay and tributary rivers (James, York, Rappahannock), including Hampton Roads, Virginia Beach, Newport News and Norfolk.

Richmond/I-95 – Counties and cities that straddle either side of I-95, including Richmond.

West – the area west of a north-south line from Clarke/Fauquier to Mecklenburg counties.
