Methodology

Ohio Northern University launched the poll in collaboration with the polling firm, Lucid. The survey was conducted among registered voters in the state of Ohio (n=668) via a Qualtrics questionnaire. Individuals sampled were sent an individualized link to the survey. Quotas included were demographics by race, gender, age, education, and party. The poll ran from October 16th to 19th. In total, the survey provides a margin of error at approximately 3.8 percent for a 95 percent confidence interval.

Quotas for race and gender were based upon the 2020 Census results, party based upon the Pew Research Center Party Affiliation by state data, with 42 percent Republicans, 40 percent Democrats, and 18 percent independents.<sup>1</sup> We weighted race based upon the 2020 race by ethnicity 2020 Census data, and age and education via the 2020 American Community Survey (ACS) 5-year supplement. We weighted the parties by the Pew Data, with those who initially labeled as independent asked to express their partisan lean via the question,

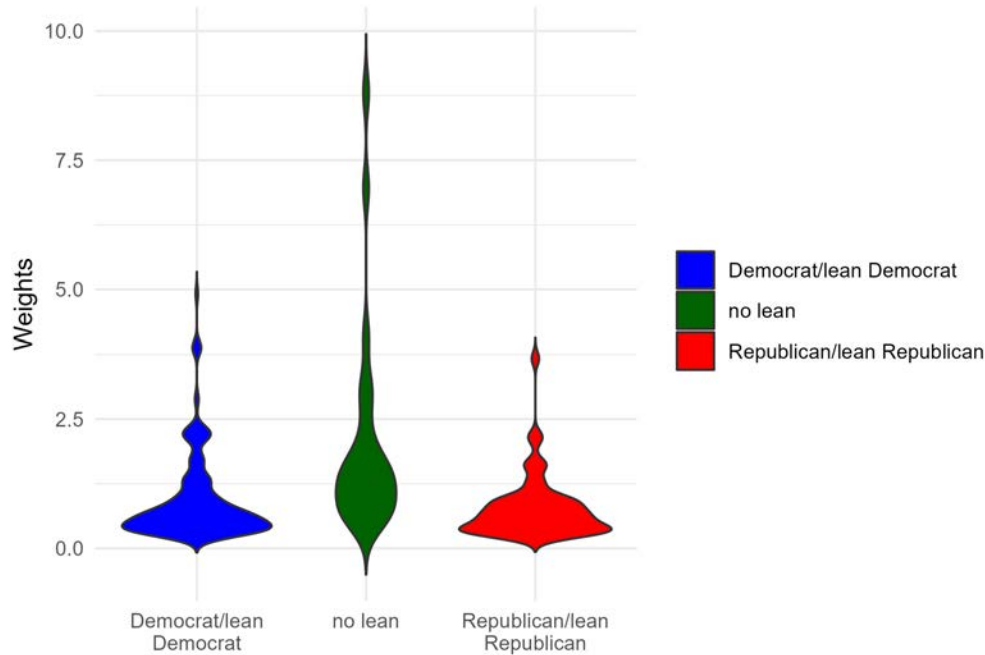

“Do you think of yourself as closer to the Republican or Democratic Party?”

We additionally provide the topline results and subsetting margin of errors employing the “pollster” package in R. We plot the distribution of these weights by party in Figure 1 below. We see that the distribution of weights skewed towards higher values for Independents than Republicans or Democrats. The median weighted value for Democrats is 0.59, 0.56 for Republicans, and 1.41 for Independents. At the 95th percentile, the weighted value for Democrats is 2.27, 2.15 for Republicans, and 6.96 for Independents. These results suggest that Independents receive more influence per sampled individual, meaning that it is important to consider the potential role of Independents sampled in the results; should we have sampled an unrepresentative distribution of Independents, then the error in interpreting the preferences for Independents will naturally be skewed. T

In regards to geographic distribution, we additionally asked for the ZIP codes of the respondent. Of Ohio’s ZIP codes, we sampled from 358 unique ZIP codes of the state’s 1,018. The sampled ZIP codes reflect those that comprise 63.4 percent of the population. Additionally, of the ZIP codes sampled, the median sampled ZIP code saw one person sampled, the 95th percentile 4, and the maximum at 11. This suggests that insofar as we sought sampling from a non-clustered geographic sample, we largely succeeded despite the lack of a regional quota filter.

Topline Results

The following are the top line results for the Northern Poll, a web-based poll of 668 registered voters in Ohio taken from October 16th to 19th. Dr. Robert Alexander and Dr. John Curiel (Ohio Northern University) led the project. Total weighted percents and margin of errors (MOEs) reported as bar plots and tables below for the question items.

Ideology survey experiment

We divided our sample into three and randomized how respondents rated themselves ideologically. We asked a general 7-point scale from liberal to conservative, a 7-point scale with the positions labeled with their respective positions, and a 7-point scale preceded by a definition of ideology. We find that a definition of ideology leads to a more uniform distribution.

Here is a 7 point scale on which the political views that people might hold are arranged from extremely liberal left to extremely conservative right Where would you place yourself on this scale Political Ideology
