

Romeo Six

Romeo Six is a Veteran owned technology company founded by former Special Operations and Special Forces members with the mission of improving the product development process for the military. Since then, Romeo Six has grown and created Romeo Six Labs, an engineering division focused on rapid prototyping and R&D. As well as Romeo Six Manufacturing, which serves the company and external customers. The vision has never changed: reinvest in experienced people and equipment to better serve whomever the customer may be, all the while delivering the best products or services around.

What Does That Mean For Transitioning Rangers?

We hire a mixture of veterans and civilian experts in their field. This mixture of experiences allows us to build a unique culture of which enables rapid product development for end users. Our focus areas are also refined, but not limited, allowing innovation and creative problem solving to help drive development. Much like in the Military; no day is the same and there's always a new solution to develop or problem to solve.
