Risk Assessment and Due Diligence Processes

As part of ensuring that there is no human trafficking and modern slavery within the Company's vendor base, supply chain, or in any other part of the business, Venminder conducted a risk assessment.

With respect to the Company's employee and contractor base, these areas were identified a low risk, given the written process and documentation that Venminder goes through with each employee and contractor, and the fact that Venminder strictly follows U.S. labor laws and regulations. Additionally, the Company has adopted an anonymous reporting / whistleblowing hotline that is open to all employees that can help identify these risks and concerns, as necessary.

With respect to the Company's supply chain and other vendors, these areas were similarly identified as a low risk, given the due diligence and vendor vetting/screening that Venminder conducts prior to entering into any new agreements or relationships. Appropriate questionnaires and documents are requested from all vendors prior to contracting and onboarding, and Venminder conducts regular third-party monitoring and maintenance of documentation to ensure this risk is properly mitigated. When a risk or potential area of concern is identified pertaining to human trafficking and modern slavery within the business or supply chain, Venminder has put workflows and processes into place to thoroughly and properly investigate and address the risk or potential area of concern. This includes increasing due diligence efforts, information gathering, and monitoring of areas that may be identified as higher risk.
